

AECG - CYSF

Rapprochement possible

by Robert Mackey

Une discussion portant sur la possibilité d'un rapprochement des relations gouvernementales entre le CYSF et l'AECG a marqué la réunion du conseil étudiant mardi dernier.

Récemment le CYSF a proposé l'idée d'une adhésion à part entière de l'AECG au conseil qui représente la plupart des étudiants de l'université de York. Président Gus Pantelidis a rejeté cette proposition. Ensuite, il a formulé et présenté une nouvelle proposition.

La nouvelle proposition présentée maintenant au conseil étudiant demande à ce que deux membres soient élus au CYSF pour représenter et exprimer les opinions de l'AECG au conseil central.

Les réactions des membres du Conseil ont été nettement divisées quant à la meilleure façon de réagir à cette situation.

D'un côté il y a des conseillers qui craignent que Glendon ne perde son autonomie en acceptant cette proposition tandis que d'autres pensent, au contraire, augmenter le pouvoir d'une voix centrale des étudiants à l'université de York.

Le président de CYSF, Peter Donato, et son vice-président des affaires extérieures, Peter Merrick sont venus à Glendon pour parler des bénéfices d'un gouvernement central renforcé. Ils ont dit que l'Administration écouterait mieux un gouvernement représentant tous les étudiants de York. Selon Merrick, les gouvernements individuels des collèges ne peuvent pas séparément produire des résultats efficaces.

Plusieurs membres de l'AECG doutent que le CYSF puisse représenter correctement les étudiants de Glendon parce que la situation unique du collège quant à son bilinguisme se trouve être différente du reste de York.

Le CYSF a même proposé la possibilité d'engager un interprète traducteur à temps-partiel. Ainsi, les représentants de Glendon pourraient communiquer aisément au CYSF dans la langue française.

Cependant, Pantelidis dit au cours d'une interview, "I doubt that someone would be able to speak French at one of their meetings... I doubt it very much."

Tous les étudiants sont encouragés à venir à la prochaine réunion de l'AECG, mardi le 6 février, pour exprimer leur avis sur la dite proposition.

Meetings continue on fee increase

by Lynn Fortin

A meeting was held on January 30 to discuss further steps regarding the proposed increase in residence fees. The meeting was conducted by GCSU Councillor Patricia Arnold while Glendon Business Manager Leon Wasser was present to explain cost figures to students. Several students also contributed to the discussion.

A decision was made to send a letter to Norman Crandles, Director of Housing and Food Operations. The letter will invite him to come to Glendon and discuss proposals made by the university administration, as well as to gather students' ideas.

The GCSU strategy espoused cooperation and compromise, with students and administration working as "business partners". Proposals placed emphasis on greater efficiency, a study of heating system costs and reducing the rent increase by the administration. Student participation in a 'paint and clean weekend' and an energy conservation campaign were advanced as areas for student cooperation.

Students will meet again in the Salon Garigue on February 5.

Program for Environmental Week

by Julie Ireton

From February 27 to March 2 Glendon will be host to Environmental Awareness Week. The Recycling Committee, in cooperation with a special Environmental Committee, has organized an informative and educational week of activities to allow students to become more aware of what they as individuals can do to improve our environmental future.

The week will include satirical skits in the cafeteria, a "dry" debate and speakers from Greenpeace and Pollution Probe. General discussions on the environment and the interplay between government and large corporations will also be part of the week.

The Recycling Committee will also be on hand throughout the week to explain its present services, how to properly utilize them and to talk about its future plans.

On Thursday March 1 there will be a recycled paper sale, a bottle drive in the Cafeteria and, at the Thursday night Pub, a percentage of the profit will go toward an organization

Martin unveils platform

by Heather Scofield

About 120 people crowded into the Senior Common Room last Monday to hear Paul Martin Jr.'s first public speech following the debates between Liberal leadership candidates at the Convention Centre.

Martin opened his speech referring to his cancelled appearance at Glendon the previous week. Because of bad weather, Martin could not deliver his first speech following his candidacy announcement in Toronto. Commented one student: "It would have been a big thing if it were the day he announced (his candidacy) but now it's just another gig on the tour."

Although the room was not filled with people in Liberal colours, as it was at the last attempt, the audience showed its support for the candidate by jumping to its feet as Martin entered the Senior Common Room. Directing his speech to the youthful audience, Martin explained his choice to speak at Glendon as a model for bilingualism, "ce que le Canada devrait être."

Developing his theme of inviting students to "venir m'aider pour une décennie", Martin spoke of how he looked to the future and to youth to change it. Promising to concentrate on intensive research and development for Canadian business if he were in office, Martin stressed the need to relieve business from its dependency on American technology and services. He promised to "créer un héritage où ce serait jamais nécessaire que les Martin won brownie points in criticizing the Conservatives' record of having no compassion in the social policy sphere, calling their policies "archaic". These points were lost quickly, however, when a joke about Martin being at a soup kitchen fell flat. Martin's comment "The Liberal Party doesn't have much money" was greeted by sarcastic smirks and silence.

Martin mentioned the homeless, education, the environment and the poor as areas needing more investment by government.

Unite against sexism and violence

Since the tragic event of the massacre in Montreal, an increasing tension between the sexes has become apparent. Women, especially feminists, have been heard to blame a single madman's actions on tendencies they claim are inherent in all men. All men, the reasoning goes, are encouraged by society to accept violence as suitable behaviour.

Most men react to this accusation by pointing out that the perpetrator was, after all, a madman. Although the saner members of both sexes generally agree that the act was a repugnant example of how badly life can mangle a person's psyche, they tend to diverge in their reactions to the meaning implied by the carnage.

One feminist group in Thunder Bay went so far as to exclude males from a ceremony held in memory of the victims. The pain felt by the women is understandable. But their pain is probably not comparable to the pain felt by young men who lost friends to the madman. And the women who denied men admittance to their ceremony also seem to forget that the madman was himself a victim of violence.

At least two women's groups have recently formed at Glendon, with the mandate, they claim, of fighting violence and sexism against women. How they propose to accomplish this task is not yet clear. It seems obvious, however, they do not plan to elicit the aid of men in their pursuit of the ideal society.

Men, too, can be victims of violence and, as such, men often take an interest in fighting the problem. Unfortunately, since women's groups by definition exclude men from their membership, they deny men the chance to join the fight. Occasionally, there is a rare man who will risk the disparagement of his peers in order to join women in their attempt to change society. The guy who sits, perhaps uncomfortably, in a women's studies course is such a person. Unfortunately, his discomfort is often as much due to the negative attitude of his female classmates as it is to those of his male friends.

Not all men are violent, nor all women non-violent. But in this day, especially in the rarefied environment of the liberal arts university, more people are finding violence unacceptable. Glendon College affords a perfect setting to bring together people with common ideals, who are willing to work toward common goals. After all, preaching to the converted only results in a form of futile self-affirmation.

Il faut donc plus que de la critique et des réactions de la part des femmes comme des hommes, il faut de l'action et du dialogue pour parvenir à un nouvel ordre des relations entre hommes et femmes.

COURRIER/FEEDBACK

Means and ends

To the Editor:

Having left Glendon in 1987 to work, I returned this fall to find a very different campus, one charged with anger, misunderstanding and sadly, a poor intellectual climate.

I refer to the recent self-righteous condemnation of all that certain individuals (and now groups) feel is wrong. Your ideals are wonderful and I support them; your methods disgust me and offend my intellectual sensibilities.

When you leave university, you will work and there you will (hopefully) discover that change is achieved by calm, thoughtful persuasion, not by screaming, denouncing, and staining the reputations of colleagues.

When you scream your objections everywhere (including on this page) you call attention to your actions, not to the problem you wish to correct; those who oppose you will believe that theirs is the correct position. Moreover, those in the middle, the undecided, are more likely to be disgusted by your actions than swayed by your message. Your actions will be remembered but the message you so desperately want to deliver will be lost.

Your committees, your letters, and your motions mean a great deal here, but when you march through those gates with your degree, you will be surprised how insulting you appear. And if you insult someone, you will never convince them.

Yours truly,
David Perscky

Réponse au "français massacré"

To the authors:

I read your letter with interest but also with some confusion. In your letter, you state the quality of the French on the signs is not to be blamed on "poor Anglophone students" who don't know any better. Well, I beg to differ but there is a FREE translation service offered by the GCSU. This service is for anyone and everyone who wishes to post a sign. I fail to see how the GCSU is responsible for the quality of signs on the walls when they provide the student body with such a service. It is the students who go to the GCSU office and are too blind to see the translator's box (located to the left of the door) who are responsible for the quality of the signs. Anyone who is at the office can inform the "poor Anglophone" that I, the translator, will usually hand back the poster fully translated the same or the next day.

Any club with its name on the sign has to claim responsibility for the syntax. There are enough Francophones in this school to revise the texts but, if you want tight control over linguistic quality, then the only solution I can foresee is for me to revise all signs before they are stamped.

Another point I would like to raise is that by writing your letter in French, you missed your target audience. All the Francophones know that the signs are full of mistakes; it's the Anglophones

Glendon debaters take on the world

by Eric Dansereau

The Glendon College Debating Society has, for the second year in a row, attended the World Debating Championship. This year the tournament was held in Glasgow, Scotland and was the largest one since its creation in 1981. Teams came from Hong Kong, New Guinea, India, Holland, and the USSR. The competition was strong. All the major universities in the world were present: Cambridge, Harvard, McGill, Oxford, Princeton, University of Toronto, Glendon College of York University!

This year the Glendon College and York University delegation was the largest ever, consisting of four debaters and two judges. Glendon's results were surprising, even if most of our debaters were experiencing a competition of this calibre for the first time. The teams were ranked above average. This gives us great hopes for the upcoming Canadian tournaments and the next world tournament held in Toronto.

Durant le tournoi, les journées étaient longues mais bien remplies.

7h30 à 9h00. On se lève, se douche, s'habille, puis on prend le petit déjeuner.

9h00 à 12h30. La compétition commence. Glendon affronte Yale (la meilleure équipe au monde en 1989), Nouveau Brunswick, et Wellesley.

Resolution: We should rescind the 2nd amendment of the American constitution (the right to bear arms).

Glendon residences contribute to women's shelter

by Leon Wasser

Leon Wasser is Glendon's Business Manager

"The dressers will be a definite improvement over the cribs we're now using to store clothes." Charlene Senn, a North York Women's Shelter board member noted, when told about the prospect of a furniture donation by Glendon to the shelter. "Not only that, now the babies will have their own beds to sleep in," Senn said.

The decision to donate the furniture was made at the January 26 meeting of the Glendon Residence User Committee, chaired by Monse Villanueva. The furniture became surplus after the arrival of new desks at Hilliard Residence prior to Christmas.

A total of 20 used dressers and one desk were donated on February 2 to the North York Women's Shelter. Vicki Innes, the Hilliard Residence Porter coordinated the late Friday afternoon "move-out" of the old furniture, which was stored temporarily in the residence's basement.

The Women's Shelter is a refuge for battered women, especially those with children, a staff worker at the shelter explained. The shelter is five years old, has 30 beds and is the only shelter of its type located in North York.

The shelter is a private non-profit co-operative organization. Donations can be sent to P.O. box 1038 Station B Downsview, Ontario, M3H 5V5.

Planners consult Glendon Community

by Kelly Paul

Last spring, Principal Runte sent a questionnaire to Glendon staff, students and faculty asking what, in their opinion, could be improved on campus.

The survey determined that a new building would be needed for extra classrooms (enough for 1900 students) and office space. Everyone agreed the new building should have plenty of windows and its style should be varied from other buildings on campus, while still harmonizing with the surroundings.

The plans for the new building should respect the fact that Glendon is "green and small" and should remain that way. The building cannot be located between Wood and Hilliard residences, as a fire access road would be needed. Glendonites will be notified and consulted before construction begins.

Some other suggestions in the campus survey have been implemented this year. Lighting was improved and a Wheeltrans pick-up area will soon be in place. Pedestrian crosswalks at Bayview and Lawrence were also added, but the situation still needs some improvement. Other suggestions included:

- larger cafeteria
- larger library
- more computer space
- women's lounge
- elevator from the lower parking lot
- audio-visual room
- a theatre with a stage, curtains and plush seats.

Dossier francophone par Gervais Oniane

L'Agence de Coopération Culturelle et Technique (ACCT) est l'unique organisme intergouvernemental de coopération francophone. Créée en Afrique à Niamey au Niger, elle regroupe aujourd'hui une quarantaine d'Etats membres. A noter que 60% du personnel de l'ACCT est originaire du Sud, et son budget ordinaire s'élève à 50 milliards de francs CFA, tandis que le Fond Commun Multilatéral est évalué à 12 milliards de francs CFA (1 F.CFA=0,02 F.F=0,04$).

L'Agence a été successivement dirigée par un Québécois (Jean-Marc Léger), un Nigérien (Dan Dicko), et deux Gabonais (François Owono-Nguéma et Paul Okoumba-D'Okwatségué), avant de voir les canadiens revenir à la charge avec l'élection le 4 décembre dernier du Québécois Jean-Louis Roy.

La contribution financière des états membres de l'ACCT n'est pas souvent évoquée dans la mesure où la Francophonie est conçue comme "une coopération de type nouveau" essentiellement basée sur l'aspect culturel. Cependant, il est sans doute important de mentionner que la France contribue à 46% du budget de l'ACCT; ensuite vient le Canada avec 32%, puis viennent la Belgique avec 12%, l'Afrique avec 6% et le Québec avec 3%.

L'ACCT est aujourd'hui "le poumon" de la Francophonie, et pour mener à bien "le projet francophone", grand défi de cette fin de siècle, son nouveau Secrétaire Général, Jean-Louis Roy a procédé depuis le dernier sommet francophone à Dakar, à la nomination de quatre nouveaux directeurs généraux : un Marocain, un Camerounais, un Burundais et un Français. Il a également procédé à certains remplacements dont celui du Congolais Jean-Baptiste Tati-Loutard par le ministre Alain Décaux. Quant à la Conférence Générale, elle est dirigée par un Malien.

L'ACCT comme on le voit, fait de son mieux pour se doter progressivement d'une ossature à l'envergure de son défi. Car au conceptuel qui permet le développement de l'idée d'une coopération privilégiée fondée sur la parenté linguistique, s'est substitué aujourd'hui une coopération en matière de développement. Il s'agit de répondre aux défis du sommet institutionnel de Paris en 1986 où 5 réseaux avaient été définis: l'agriculture, les industries de la langue, l'information scientifique et technique, l'énergie et la communication. Et les deux autres sommets de Québec (1987) et Dakar (1989) en ont ajoutés d'autres dont l'environnement et l'épineuse question des droits de l'Homme.

La Francophonie est donc autre chose que la défense de la langue française contre la langue anglaise; c'est définir un nouvel espace de solidarité en tenant compte du trait d'union entre ceux qui se servent du français; c'est-à-dire Belgique, Benin, Burkina-Faso, Burundi, Canada, Centrafrique, Comores, Congo, Côte d'Ivoire, Djibouti, La Dominique, France, Gabon, Guinée, Haïti, Liban, Luxembourg, Mali, Ile Maurice, Monaco, Niger, Rwanda, Sénégal, Iles Seychelles, Tchad, Togo, Tunisie, Vanuatu, Vietnam, Zaïre (les 30 Etats membres) plus, Cameroun, Egypte, Guinée-Bissau, Laos, Maroc, Mauritanie, Sainte-Lucie (les 7 Etats associés), ainsi que le Nouveau-Brunswick, le Québec (les 2 gouvernements associés) et la Guinée-Equatoriale (pays observateur).

Cependant, il ne suffit pas de vulgariser la Francophonie pour en faire un instrument du dialogue Nord-Sud; il faut y mettre les moyens. 22% des états membres de l'ONU sont francophones; 50% des Etats africains à l'ONU sont francophones; 6% de la population mondiale est francophone. Or le PNB de cette grande famille ne représente que 8% du PNB mondial, soit le PNB de la RFA et de l'Italie! Au fond, la Francophonie a-t-elle vraiment les moyens de ses ambitions?

Bilingual affairs incentive programme

by Trisha Yio

Glendon College - uniquely bilingual.

There are few Glendon Students who are unfamiliar with that phrase. Bilingualism is indisputably the backbone of the Glendon community. However, the reality is that only a minority of Glendon students are fully bilingual. Most students come here in order to become fluent in their second language. This is a challenging task for many students, as Toronto is an English city, providing few opportunities for Anglophones to practice the French language and experience the French culture.

Le comité des Affaires Bilingues de l'AECG s'engage à fournir aux étudiants du collège Glendon l'occasion de pratiquer encore plus leur langue seconde. En effet, le comité des Affaires Bilingues a conçu un nouveau projet d'encouragement. Ce projet aidera financièrement les clubs et les services officiels de Glendon qui promulguent le bilinguisme. Ceci implique que toutes les activités devront encourager activement l'utilisation de la langue seconde de chaque participant. Les activités socio-culturelles sont aussi recommandées, elles ne sont cependant pas obligatoires.

The committee has established a list of criteria which must be met by the clubs and services in order for them to be considered for funding. Interested representatives of clubs and services are invited and encouraged to talk to any GCSU or Bilingual Affairs committee member for more information. Detailed lists of criteria and application forms will be available at the GCSU office or from the Director of Bilingual Affairs.

Contamination

by Tara Scott

You have probably noticed (and hopefully made use of) the large gray bins that were placed around the campus some months ago as part of the Glendon recycling program. The purpose of these bins is to collect empty aluminum cans for recycling. When finished with your aluminum can, instead of throwing it in the garbage container, place it in the gray recycling bins. An easy task, right?

Wrong! It seems Glendon Cafeteria users are confused by the simplicity of this task. Members of the Glendon Recycling Committee have found such objects as tin cans, glass bottles, cigarettes, sandwiches and coffee creamers in the cafeteria bin. These items are contaminants and thus cause the bin of aluminum cans to be wasted. It is easy to place your garbage in the garbage containers and your empty aluminum cans in the recycling bins.

This may seem like a trivial matter but helping the environment of today through an effective recycling programme will improve the environment of tomorrow. It's your future and contamination is your problem. Let's make an effort to take recycling seriously.

Glendon recycling update

Everyone should pitch in and recycle...

by Julie Ireton

As students and consumers, there are many ways we can do our part in helping to clean up the environment. The Glendon Recycling Committee has offered some ways for Glendonites to reduce, reuse and recycle. This committee stresses the fact that individuals can make a difference by changing their habits, as well as buying products which are now 'environmentally friendly'. As consumers we must also look at ideas like recycleable packaging and limiting the amount we waste. As the saying goes: Waste not, Want not.

Paper recycling and cardboard recycling have also been implemented at Glendon and it is hoped that more students will utilize these forms of recycling. It is great to see so many students using the aluminum can recycling containers located in the Cafeteria and in residence common rooms.

However, everyone must realize that a cigarette butt, straw or gum wrapper deposited in a can or in the recycling containers can ruin an entire batch of cans. Alcan will not accept any shipments of cans which are contaminated due to the complexity of the recycling process and the danger of having any materials other than aluminum present during the operation. It is important for students to avoid including garbage when they are depositing their cans.

The Recycling committee will also consider the recycling of juice bottles in the cafeteria. These bottles can be sent back to the company, sterilized and reused. At Procter Field House the Squash Lounge recycles glass bottles, yet it does not have a bin for recycling aluminum cans. This could be looked into by our Recycling Committee.

Private universities The marketplace of ideas

Excerpted from a report presented to GCSU by Mike Laxer

We are all aware of the pressing problem of underfunding that faces post-secondary educational institutions in this era of budgetary cutbacks. As the years pass, government dollars seem to fall further and further behind student needs and the quality of education in this province has suffered immeasurably. A new proposal is in the works to help offset this problem, one which, however, could sound the death knell for quality public education, if and when it is accepted.

The plan proposes to establish a privately funded university in the Queensville area (8 kilometres north of Newmarket) within the next decade. A committee, known as the Gwillimbury Foundation for the Advancement of Post-Secondary Education in the York Region, has been working on the plan for the last two years.

The university is to be situated in the centre of a massive development plan which hopes to establish a new community on an area of several thousand acres all around Queensville. A development consortium known as Queensville Properties has dedicated a 40-hectare site for the university and stated they hope to see the property values of the whole development escalate as a result of the new school. This is just one example of the link between private universities and the profit motive behind them.

We must not underestimate the danger this kind of proposal represents. Although to date the government has not approved the proposal, it refuses to oppose it. It continues to "consider" the idea. But this proposition must be adamantly opposed. A solution to the enduring problems of universities has to be found, but it must be a solution that will encompass all sectors of society, not one that will exclude all but the rich élite. The government has a responsibility to provide quality educational services. If it refuses to do so, we must not turn to private sector "white-knights" to give us salvation but we must actively pressure the government to do what it is supposed to do.

Former Ontario Education Minister Bette Stephenson stated in a January 11 Toronto Star article that "the demands for university education continue to grow, but the funds available don't and some alternative is needed to achieve university excellence." She also said some funds are already in trust and more have been pledged by various unnamed corporate and private sources.

One hurdle the committee still has to overcome is a governmental policy which has prohibited private universities in Canada for over thirty years. Stephenson said Minister of Colleges and Universities Sean Conway has been asked to change that policy to allow for their re-establishment. While at this time this is the only proposal of its kind in the province, if government policy should change and allow for the reappearance of private universities, we may rest assured that it will not be the last.

Public Universities

A public university is one which is owned and regulated by the government. The government heavily subsidises the operation of the institution, making tuition fees affordable or, in some countries, eliminating them completely. Under this model the quality of university education depends on the amount of capital the government is willing to invest on expansion or modernisation. When a government fails to invest adequate capital, as is happening in Ontario, education can become sub-standard.

However, governmental subsidisation allows for education to be within the reach of all students who qualify for entry. Under this form of education, accessibility is based not on wealth but on ability. This allows for a certain equality of opportunity for all members of society, regardless of social background. Universities are not bastions of the rich, but are instead open to all serious students. This helps to create a society in which victimization according to social caste is much less pronounced.

Public universities are the predominant form of private and public institutions. The publicly-funded universities and colleges are, however, horribly underfunded and relatively sub-standard. They also represent the only form of post-secondary education within the reach of the average student. This is a living example of what can happen if private universities are allowed to compete with under-funded public institutions.

The reality is that the more education gets left to the initiative of the private sector, the less government will contribute. Governments use the existence of high quality private universities to justify spending less to insure the quality of public universities. They will claim that, since the private sector is doing a good job, there is no real need for them to. Over the years, public universities fall further behind.

Conclusion

The present proposal does not have the blessing of the president of the Association of Colleges and Universities of Canada, Claude Lajeunesse. He feels that this university would be an "elitist" one, with people of limited means being essentially barred. He also feels that his proposal will do nothing to eliminate the financial problems facing public schools. He could have gone much further; they will, in fact, do much to make these financial and quality problems worse.

It is the job of our student union to protect the interests of ALL Glendon students. We too have a responsibility, a responsibility to ensure that no government betrays those who have put their trust in us by electing us to office. I believe we can rise to the occasion and fight this Draconian possibility.

university education in all of Europe, Great Britain and Canada. Glendon is a public university.

Private Universities

A private university is a university which is owned by an individual, a group of individuals, or, in certain cases, a corporation. It does not receive governmental subsidies and is not subject to governmental control. While its function is to provide educational services, its purpose is also to make money.

As a result of the fact that the government does not subsidise its operation, private universities, in order to make a profit, must demand of their students exorbitant entry (tuition) fees. In some of the more prestigious American universities (eg. Cornell) this fee can be in excess of $25,000 (US) per year. While most of the students in private universities undoubtedly deserve to be there, many thousand of others who are equally talented do not have the social background required to pay.

The Effect of Private Universities on Public Universities

While most of the great universities of the United States are private, one little known fact is that the U.S. has a dual educational system, comprised of both

Recommendation

It is the recommendation of the author of this report that the Council of the GCSU ACTIVELY oppose the proposal to establish a private university in this province as well as the additional proposal to change government policies to allow for the establishment of such institutions. I believe we must act now, before the government makes its decision, so that we can still have some influence, however small.

We can do so by:

- 1) adopting a position opposing the proposal
- 2) sending letters of protest to the provincial government and the Mayor of East Gwillimbury
- 3) making our position known to the Glendon population and informing them about the dangers faced
- 4) working with the OFS and other student organizations to ensure maximum coordination and impact.

Au menu

by Janet Ellis

Judging by the crowds, everyone is glad to have the Bistro open again. The Glendon Food Service Committee (GFSC) welcomes Colin the chef back to work. At our last meeting Eddie Yagham said the Bistro would be glad to take reservations for parties of five and more in the future. You can make arrangements in person or simply call the Bistro at X88729. Personally, I want to apologize to Michel and thank him for the hell I put him through last week. We will reserve in the future. Now that most of us have our second OSAP installment, the GFSC would like to remind you to tip your server in cash if you can.

Also at the Bistro, patrons may substitute a chef's salad for fries. The new menu has been ratified and will be available after Reading Week. This one will be translated properly. Please note that the Bistro will be closed during Reading Week.

Anything from the Bar?

Regarding beer and wine service at the Bistro, the new LLBO law makes it impossible for the Bistro staff to provide alcoholic libations until they participate in the Server Intervention Program. Hopefully this can be accomplished during Reading Week. Patrons will soon be able to purchase a bottle of wine individually rather than just a glass, but don't count on getting the whole bottle all to yourself. According to law, we may drink but we may not get drunk. I, for one, am delighted that the government of Ontario has taken such a Brotherly interest in my private life. I look forward to the day when they also decide what I may drink, how often I may drink and with whom I may drink. Personal choice is such a burden.

The committee also discussed the popularity of the Everfresh mineral fruit drinks in the Caf "Outlet". Business Manager

Leon Wasser reported that the Glendon Recycling Committee has expressed concern because these drinks are bottled and we don't have a glass recycling program. Liquid for thought.

We passed on the many compliments we have been hearing about the salad bar to the manager. It looks great, everything is nice and fresh, and the new dressings are a real bonus. It is still, however, outrageously expensive.

The efficiency of the grill staff was called into question again. As we can't be there all the time, please report any problems you see to Eddie Yagham immediately. You can also complain to the cook directly, if you can make yourself understood.

Fine China and Silverware

As you may remember from "Pardon?", residents are asked to return any trays, dishes and cutlery they may have "borrowed" from the Caf. I know that these are lovely and prized possessions but if you can't bring yourself to part with them, then Rest-aurionics will have to buy more. Guess who will end up paying for them? You can leave them with your porter, no questions asked.

And speaking of trays... Who will she trash this week? Well no one, actually. I'm happy to say that I didn't catch anybody transgressing since the last Au Menu. The Old Dining Hall is looking much better. Thanks for pitching in.

Finally, don't forget to do the lunch thing at the Pub once in a while. The specials are great and reasonably priced. You don't have to spend all your scrip at the --- Shop.

The next meeting of the GFSC will be on Thursday February 22, at 5:30 in the Caf. We hope you'll join us. GFSC wishes you a safe and productive Reading Week. Don't forget your sunscreen.

save you five down the road," he reiterated.

The candidate fielded questions about gun control (mentioning he knew one of the "girls" killed in Montreal in December), Meech Lake, business, taxes and campaign spending. Martin said he would not give a total disclosure of his campaign donors but he would follow the donations policy of the Party. He added he thought there should be a review of Party policy for campaign funding.

Martin finished his address by repeating his ten year pledge to change Canada to a united multicultural society with an environmental base for all government policies.

Crise dans les universités

par Jean-Luc Prost

Le milieu étudiant a connu quelques agitations ces derniers temps en France. En 1986, les structures universitaires avaient été massivement paralysées par un mouvement de grève largement suivi, suite à une réforme très controversée de Monsieur Devaquet. A cette époque le problème concernait les critères d'admission jugés trop sélectifs et donc élitistes.

Cette fois-ci le problème est assez différent. Il concerne la surpopulation devenue alarmante dans certaines universités. En effet, de plus en plus d'étudiants font des études supérieures, ce qui est une des priorités du gouvernement et du ministère de l'éducation afin d'avoir une meilleure qualification des jeunes arrivant sur le marché du travail.

Cependant, bien que le nombre d'étudiants ait augmenté de manière considérable ces vingt dernières années, les universités ne se sont pas développées en conséquence et on se retrouve avec d'énormes problèmes dans certaines de celles-ci, en particulier les universités parisiennes.

Les locaux n'ont plus une capacité d'accueil suffisante. Les amphithéâtres sont surpeuplés, certains cours sont donnés dans des salles de fortune qui sont souvent en sous-sol et sans fenêtre et qui parfois ne sont pas aux normes de sécurité en vigueur. Il n'est pas rare de voir certains étudiants arriver une heure à l'avance pour être sûr d'avoir une place assise pour suivre un cours.

Le personnel administratif s'est joint aux revendications des étudiants car, étant en nombre insuffisant, il ne peut plus accomplir sa tâche dans des conditions acceptables. Il faut aussi ajouter que le nombre de professeurs est nettement insuffisant pour dispenser un enseignement dans de bonnes conditions.

Le Ministre de l'éducation a promis de prendre des mesures nécessaires aussi vite que possible. Cela risque d'être assez long et la question maintenant est de savoir si les étudiants seront suffisamment patients...

Deuxième groupe féministe formé

par Marie Dionne

On a souvent tendance à croire que les agressions sexuelles, les harcèlements sexuels..., en un mot, la violence infligée aux femmes est quelque chose qui n'arrive qu'aux autres.

Se croire ainsi immunisé contre ce fléau ne fait qu'augmenter le besoin pressant des groupes d'action d'informer les gens et de les rendre conscients de leur vulnérabilité face à ce problème.

C'est ce qu'on a décidé de faire à Glendon. L'initiative a été prise, il y a quelques semaines, par une quinzaine d'étudiants. En fondant un groupe, Students Concerned with Women's Issues - Violence Against Women On Campus, ces étudiants ont en vue d'éduquer la communauté du collège sur les différentes sortes de violence qui prennent ou pourraient prendre place sur le campus, par le biais de séminaires, rencontres, travail de groupe, etc...

Ce groupe et son organisatrice, Patricia Arnold, invitent les étudiants de Glendon à participer au combat contre la violence via une éducation poussée dans le domaine et une prise de conscience collective propre à Glendon.

Ce nouveau groupe travaille en étroite collaboration avec Women's Coalition, un second groupe portant sur la condition féminine à Glendon.

Ayant pour buts de renseigner la communauté du collège de la sensibiliser au problème de la violence faite aux femmes, et de lui démontrer la nécessité de l'existence de tels groupes d'action et leur désir d'aider les victimes et d'améliorer la condition de la femme, ce nouveau groupe démontre bien le besoin d'être entendues plus que jamais, et la volonté de modifier les comportements qui détruisent l'autonomie et la sécurité de la femme.

Enfin, il est essentiel de signaler la présence de la ligne SOS Femmes, une ligne d'information et de détresse qui est à l'écoute des femmes francophones du Sud de l'Ontario, victimes de violence, ou en situation de conflit. Ce service est offert gratuitement, de 8h00 à 20h00, en composant le 1-800-387-8603.

Garbage in, garbage out

by Julie Ireton

A recent pamphlet sent out by Environment Ontario sheds some light on environmental facts that Ontarians should be aware of. The most important thing for the consumer to remember is that recycling helps to minimize the amount of garbage eliminated in landfill sites and through incineration. Recycling reduces pollution, that have to be informed of this fact. I'm sorry to say that your letter, by being in French, defeated its purpose. It is for that reason that my answer is in English, so that the Anglophones who can read French well enough to read your letter will read this one and know about the translation services offered here.

saves energy and creates new jobs.

The average Ontario household creates almost a tonne of solid waste each year. That is a substantial amount of refuse, especially if the household does not recycle newspapers, glass bottles and aluminum cans.

All refuse created by Ontarians is sent to dump sites where the garbage is eventually incinerated. Some corporations also use incinerators to create energy. Recent studies on the effects of incineration show that incinerated emissions are the largest source of dioxins in the world. It has been found that the burning of refuse is not a solution to the garbage problem.

This 'Mass-Burn Incineration' has been described as "Garbage in, Garbage out". Among the harmful contaminants emitted are lead and zinc which can contaminate the soil and poison food supplies within a few miles of the incinerator site. Acid rain, carbon dioxide and carbon monoxide pollute water supplies and the air we breathe, as well as creating hazardous incinerator ash.

Companies and individuals in Ontario and all over the world utilizing incinerators as a form of energy or simply to rid themselves of refuse are, unfortunately, dumping their problems into "someone else's backyard"...

Brillante et populaire Carmen

Carmen : brillant et sans passion.

par Naomi LeeFook

C'était merveilleux! C'était fantastique! C'était Carmen, qui jouait au O'Keefe Centre. On sait que Carmen est un des opéras le plus populaire au monde. Et cette production faite par la Compagnie d'Opéra du Canada (Canadian Opera Company) a fait réellement ressortir que Carmen est un des plus beaux du monde.

Les acteurs que j'ai vus (il y a deux groupes différents) avaient beaucoup d'esprit et on sentait qu'il y avait un courant qui passait entre eux, ce qui était encore plus évident dans le troisième acte où tous les acteurs étaient sur scène dans un camp de bohémiens. Tous les acteurs ont conservé leurs personnages tout en démontrant une unité parfaite du chœur.

La décoration théâtrale était incroyable! Elle était très vibrante et réaliste - c'était comme si j'étais là, à Séville au temps de "Carmen".

Les seules choses qui me dérangent dans cette production étaient qu'au commencement il y avait un moment de "feedback" quand un des soldats a commencé son solo. Après cet acte, le niveau sonore étaient plus bas pour le reste du premier acte. Quelquefois il était très difficile d'entendre les chanteurs sur la musique de l'orchestre.

Mais la chose qui m'a ennuagée le plus fut Cynthia Clarey dans le rôle de Carmen. Il est vrai qu'elle a une très belle voix, mais elle n'avait pas l'esprit du personnage Carmen. Traditionnellement, Carmen est une femme qui ne se soucie de rien: elle a beaucoup de passion, puis elle est fringante. Ce que Mme. Clarey n'a pas montré dans son interprétation de Carmen.

Mais Barry McCauley qui interprétait le rôle de Don José, a joué son personnage avec beaucoup d'émotion dans sa voix et ses gestes. A la fin, j'ai beaucoup eu pitié de lui, pas seulement parce qu'il avait tué l'amour de sa vie, mais aussi parce qu'il allait lui-même mourir.

En tout les cas, la production de Carmen était très bien faite. C'est dommage que la COC ne puisse faire cette pièce plus souvent qu'à tous les six ans.

Glasnost at Glendon

by Peter Grevstad

The recent events in Eastern Europe are rocking the foundations of the Socialist political machine. As Auden said: "These are stirring times for the editors of newspapers: History is in the making; Mankind is on the March." In 1980 in Poland a movement called Solidarnosc was born and the Western media began to take notice. Our journalists began, in earnest, to show us communism 'with a human face'. When we look beyond the tumultuous and sometimes pathetic human dramas played out with journalistic sensationalism, turning our attention to the origins of the revolutionary sentiment, then we find it difficult to separate popular uprising from its roots in popular culture.

Creative expression in popular culture seeks to inform, expose and anatomize collective human sensibility. Tadeusz Rozewicz (1921-) is considered one of the most important voices in modern Polish drama. He is a prolific writer in both creative and critical endeavours. His most popular dramatic work Mariage Blanc will be presented, for the first time in English in Canada, here at Glendon from February 19-24. The play will be directed by D.D. Kugler, the dramaturge for Necessary Angel Theatre.

Kugler's most recent work in Toronto includes Newhouse, which was staged in an arena and a production of Michael Ondaatje's Coming Through Slaughter. Dominique Davies is the assistant director for the production, and Annabelle Tully-Barr is the technical director for Theatre Glendon.

The work will be presented in the round, and the individual design heads for the company are all making significant and provocative contributions to the production. This work is intelligent, humorous, and even sexy. We look forward to your participation in this experience, and welcome any questions that you may have about it.

DEE-JAYZ OF THE WEEK

Le variété est au coeur de CKRG, à 800 sur la bande AM; lundi après midi par exemple. L'émission "Short to the Top" de Greg Volk vous ramène à l'époque de 'Rhythm and Blues'. Billie H., Sarah V., Booker T and the MG's, Wilson Pickett, Buddy Holly and Howlin' Wolf groove from 12-2 every Monday. Besides being an all-around pleasant listen, Greg is informative. He researches events in music history from this week in years past. Give him a listen, and stay tuned for Gerry Sabbadon's Noise Factory. Gerry vous introduit aux groupes 'industriels' (souvent avec des noms assez bizarres. Ever heard of Mc 900ft, Jesus, or the 9-Inch Nails?). These and such choice groups as the Cocteau Twins, Skinny Puppy, Front 242, the Normal and Ministry are Monday Factory fare between 2-3:30pm. Never harsh, an intriguing and danceable alternative listen. Tune into 800AM as CKRG tests its frequency.

Not just your local band

by Naomi LeeFook

"We are treading water in a stagnant sea of retarded sexuality."

So speaks Ulterior Motives' drummer Mike Kerwin, about the band's current situation.

Not that Ulterior Motives is doing its last tour. Rather, they just did their first Toronto gig after playing their local area of Newmarket and Aurora, at Lee's Palace Monday January 29, as part of a triple bill that included local popular club band People of the Rain.

But you'd never know that this was their first T.O. show. Collectively, all five musicians have at least 25 years of musical experience - something which stands out in their live show. They know how to play for and, more importantly, play to a crowd.

Some of the highlights of the evening were the band's original La La La song, and their excellent cover version of Just Like Heaven by the Cure.

Each band member listens to different styles of music: for example, Mike listens to Rush and Yes; guitarist Julian is a Beatles fan; singer Steve likes Pink Floyd; and bassist Rick likes a lot of Heavy Metal. To combine all of these styles on a stereo-plus-keyboards would sound just plain awful. But to combine them live on stage is what Ulterior Motives do best.

Wish these guys the best - they deserve it, and don't miss them on their next turn of Toronto's clubs.
