Rates up, services down

Kate Quinn

Tuesday, January 29, 1991
Norm Candles, Director of Housing and Food Services for York University made several proposals to the Residence Budget Committee. Most of them were in the nature of cutting certain services or raising the prices of others. Three of the most important ones were listed in Pardon! where students were asked to respond to these proposals so that the co-chairs of residence council, Lori Harris and Christine Loth, could report our feelings back to the Committee.
Norm Candles proposes to:
1) Cut the linen exchange service
2) Cut all night-porter positions
3) Make all rooms in residence - small single, double, and regular single the same price and the fourth which did not get included in Pardon! is:

4) To raise the kitchen-plan user’s fee to $500.00

This is not the first time an attempt has been made to eliminate the linen exchange service. There may be less than 200 students at Glendon that use it every single week, but each of those students would probably do one more load of laundry every single week.

The night porter position provides approximately fifteen part-time jobs on campus. It is not that well paid at $6.00/hr, but it is one that provides greater security for the residences. The first thing on the list of the night porter’s primary duties is: “Control access to the residence buildings, by ensuring all exterior doors are locked, and that all visitors are indeed guests of residents.”
Rent for a single room this year (not including the meal plan) was $2,291.00. A small single or a double room cost $1,915.00. The difference between the two prices is $366.00.

The proposed overall rent hike (including meal plan) is approximately $480.00, making a difference of over $900.00 for anyone who is in a small single or a double room.

People who are on the kitchen plan face a similar cost hike. This year’s kitchen fee was $100.00. The compulsory meal plan was $550.00 ($500.00 in scrip, $50.00 goes to the University for operating costs). Groceries for a school year amount to approximately $1400.00 (based on 240 days in residence at a cost of $6.00 per 10 days worth of groceries). Next year’s proposed fees would bring the total cost to at least $2,450.00 for food and kitchen plan alone.

Another Residence Budget Committee meeting was held on February 6, 1991. These items did not get discussed but are on the agenda for two further scheduled meetings. The next two meetings will be on February 8 and 12, 1991.

Said Lori Harris about the whole procedure, “The process is really slow and not encouraging to students. It’s frustrating because it seems as if the administration is looking for every excuse to prevent students from protesting. The only thing we can do is persevere and make them aware of how much dissatisfaction there is with the administration.”

I hope Lori and Chris, who were, by the way, the only undergraduate residence representatives at the first meeting, will give them hell. These proposals simply cannot be allowed to be pushed through.

Changements dans les départements

Rony Behar

Dans le proche avenir, notre merveilleux collège connaîtra quelques changements assez significatifs. Premièrement, au cours d’une récente réunion du conseil du la faculté, le programme spécialisé en informatique a finalement été accepté. En d'autres termes, si le Sénat l'approuve, les étudiants de Glendon pourront s'inscrire à l'année prochaine dans un programme de quatre ans ayant pour but d'obtenir un baccalauréat en informatique. Auparavant, seul un bac général de trois ans était disponible. Cependant, cette nouvelle ne fut pas acceptée sans aucune discussion. En effet, c'est la deuxième fois que ce projet est présenté au conseil de la faculté. La première tentative, qui eut lieu au milieu de la session d'automne 90, fut confrontée à une opposition visuelle de la part de certains membres des départements de mathématiques et d'histoire. Un membre du département de mathématiques indiquait que ce programme avait des lacunes dans les cours de mathématiques prérequis. Il ajouta qu'il fallait augmenter le nombre de cours en mathématiques pour rendre ce programme au niveau du baccalauréat spécialisé. Les arguments du membre du département d'histoire furent tout autant. Il expliquait que Glendon était un collège d'art et n'avait donc pas besoin d'un bac spécialisé en informatique, étant donné que c'est une science. La conviction avec laquelle le département d'histoire s'opposait à ce programme était surprenante. Il est facile d'imaginer l'existence d'intérêts personnels qui ne profitent pas toujours au collège en entier. Mais les étudiants de Glendon ne furent pas ces fois victimes de toute cette politique car certains compromis de part du chef du département d'informatique ont permis de faire accepter ce programme.

Deuxièmement, au cours de la réunion suivante du conseil de la faculté, le sujet du débat fut celui de l'avenir du département des sciences naturelles. En effet, ce département compte au moins deux professeurs qui approchent de l'âge légal de la retraite. Il a donc été question de savoir si ces derniers seraient remplacés. De plus, un professeur francophone, qui avait quitté le département des sciences naturelles il y a plusieurs années, n'a jamais vraiment été remplacé. Le poste fut jusqu'à présent occupé uniquement par des professeurs contractuels à qui temps partiel. Par conséquent, ce vide présent dans le département fut également mis sur la table de discussion.
Les membres du conseil qui sont en faveur d'un remplacement de ces professeurs, indiquèrent qui si ce dernier ne se produisait pas, cela maquerrait la mise à mort de ce département. Le directeur-adjoint, M. Jean-Claude Jaubert, ajouta qu'il n'a jamais été question de remettre en cause l'existence de ce département. L'intérêt de ce débat a donc été plutôt axé sur la place qui occupera le département...
Less for more

Once again it is feeding time. That time of year when the University decides it is even more money hungry than last year and the students are left to satisfy its appetite.

While the York administration proposes to increase residence fees by approximately 12%, (an increase of over $500.00 from last year) students must take action to try to prevent this from happening. Last year Glendon students stood out in the crowd of protesters at the York campus when residence increases came into question. It was evident that students can make a difference after the administration took suggestions into consideration. But if the students don’t stand together and speak out now we’ll only have ourselves to blame later.

Those who have been in residence since the fall of 1988 and are planning on calling residence home for their fourth year, will have seen an approximate increase of 40% in residence prices during their stay. In contrast, the increase maintained by the Rent Control Board of Ontario during these four years, only adds up to 19%. This means, as residence students, we have been subject to 21% more increases than the general public. Many believe that it remains cheaper for students to live off campus. Living in residence is a convenience, and for some a necessity, which should be available, not only to those who have the most money.

Not only are prices to go up but the administration has also proposed to cut essential residence services such as night porters, and undergraduate linen service, as well as making all rooms the same price regardless of size. How can we, as students, allow York to increase the prices and at the same time cut services- some of which are essential to our security?

The University’s appetite, which hungers to “take more and give less”, should concern all students. It effects us all. Protests, petitions, letters, and open meetings are ways that the student body can lobby the administration. Keep informed and get involved. Let Norm Crandles’ ears ring with “No way! We won’t pay!” until he has no choice but to listen to our dissatisfaction.

Managing the greenness

Lhakpa Shomar

Students have shown concern about ecological management of the grassy grounds. The Director of the Physical Plant, Elias Hawa, Campus Superintendent, Gord Gard and Supervisor Grant Barry were interviewed about these concerns.

In the last two years, leaves have been disposed of in a compost in the bush. Barry asserted that there is no dumping of rubbish there, only leaves and branches. Besides being placed in the bush, leaves have also been disposed of at the back of Wood Residence. This is not detrimental, Gard said, as it will eventually turn into top soil, help hold the roots of the grass in the ground and in this way stop the erosion of the bank.

The decomposition of cellulose (in leaves) may be accompanied by a very slow formation of methane gas which seeps into the atmosphere. However, this is not harmful since methane gas is naturally produced when trees and other vegetation decay and is not dangerous in small quantities said Gard.

Students and staff may have noticed bricks lying around on campus. People have been dumping bricks on the lower campus and this is being cleaned up by Physical Plant but some are Glendon property and kept for storage.

Chemical fertilizers are generally rich in nitrates. When such fertilizers are applied, the soil is disrupted by the replacement of organic nitrogen with inorganic nitrogen. The soil becomes much less porous as a result and therefore the supply of oxygen to the roots is decreased. The roots, then are unable to grow fully. A large amount of unusual inorganic nitrogen in the soil is eventually leached out or runs off into rivers, lakes and other surface waters.

At Glendon, an inorganic fertilizer (777) which does not contain a phosphate filler, is used on the grass, trees, and flower beds. It is better for the environment than common commercial fertilizers, Gard stated. Gard also pointed out that weeds are only sprayed when it is absolutely necessary. "We don't spray as a habit, only as a last resort to keep disease in check." When there is spraying, either for weeds or insects, the policy entails sending a notice to everyone, faculty and students, at least five days before the actual spraying.

As for the area fenced off in the quad, there was no spraying done there although according to the Physical Plant it was considered. In the fall (1990) a fence was put up around a section so that people would not walk on the newly sodded grass. The grass and topsoil were replaced in order to stem the destructive activity of white grubs which eat the roots of the grass. Again Gard emphasized that insecticide is used only when the situation is out of control.

Topics for improvement are frequently discussed, and we are open to ideas and suggestions, stated Grant.

Time to start a New Year

Lhakpa Shomar

Happy New Year everybody! No, this is not a belated greeting; in fact, it is just in time for this coming Friday, February 15, 1991 marks the beginning of the "Iron-Sheep" year of the Western calendar.

In anticipation of this holiday, Tibetans set aside a day for baking the traditional cookies, called "kapsas", that must accompany the ringing in of the New Year. Other customs include drinking homemade beer or "chang", that is fermented from rice, and making Tibetan butter tea and planting wheat, all of which are offered to the Tibetan religious gods.

On the day of the New Year, Tibetans wake up early in the morning. Tibetan dress is worn and the whole family gathers to drink warmed "chang" with "tsamps" (barley flour), dried cheese and "droma" - a special grass root traditionally endowed with good merit. After this morning meal, the family assemblies in the "cho-kung" or prayer room.

The long-adhered to custom of sampling the offerings of "tsamps" and flour and crying "Tashi Delke" - which translated means "Good luck" - is continued. This ritual is also enthusiastically performed by any visitors who enter their fellow countryman's home and is said to generate good will. Offerings of food are followed by a period of prayer. Thus, the morning of the first day of the New Year is family-oriented and relatively quiet.

However, the following days are filled with dancing and singing. A special treat occurred when the "dagar" - convent tours to call on homes. This jester-like fellow, characterized by a quick wit and an extreme costume: a mask, no shoes, a cane and an oversized bowl - brings good luck and all the more merriment to the households fortunate enough to receive him.

It is unfortunate that the Tibetan New Year is not an official holiday in the western world because sometimes the New Year celebrations in Tibet would last for as long as five days.

Despite this and other cultural differences there is one presiding similarity between the Canadian and Tibetan New Year. Both are seen as a time for fresh beginnings, for self-improvement and for a better future. I wish the Glendon community and others elsewhere a prosperous New Year of peace and hope. Tashi Delke!
A poil is not au poil

Frédéric Tremblay

Well! someone would have to be deaf not to know what a poil means, even blind, because it is written all over the campus. Even having both these physical disadvantages, I imagine that even the sense of touch would be sufficient to permit discovery of its meaning. All this means is that this French expression is now more famous than the Alteri Sacculo of Glendon College.

If holding a carnival makes the students “sleep” through the more important issues such as the budget, meal plan, etc, well I just want to say that it permitted the students to wake up their sexual appetite even if it was already well awake.

Before dishing out all my shit on you (and don’t worry, I’m not going to eat it - like the guy at the Disgusting Food Eating Competition), with my habitual criticism, my morals or my high standards if you prefer, I’m going to explain to you the new expression au poil. When you hear a francophone saying that something is au poil, it means that something is kind of precise, perfect, great. For instance, your girlfriend could tell you, “C’est au poil quand tu es au poil.” Catch it? YES! Au poil.

Personally, I think that this article is well-titled but I also could have titled it, “Sex Lost the Contest”, or “Simply a Poil”. In my opinion, certain events in the carnival were far from being au poil. I don’t know if it is the influence of the war in the Gulf, but I dare say that some people went too far, or were rather too explicit in their deeds...

As usual, I conducted my own inquiry among students and it looks like many people are fed up with the female body being the joke of the entire population. I want to take this opportunity to use this “sexual” article to write about two English words. Every language has its dirty words. However some seem to be more disgusting than others. In English, we could agree that cunt and bitch are possibly the worst. Excuse me, they are used as street language and sound the worst, but in fact, they should be worshipped. This is what I learned from The Woman’s Encycl. of Myths and Secrets. Originally cunt was an “Oriental Great Goddess”. It is not a slang word but a true language word. Cunt, which was synonymous with women acquired an insulting modern sense because “Medieval clergy similarly perceived obscenity in female-genital shrines of the pagans: holy caves, wells, groves. Any such place was called mus mus devil. Bitch was one of the most sacred titles of the Goddess Artemis-Diana. Even our language is perverted. Is that not incredible? I don’t want to go further, let’s go back to the carnival.

Others expressed their anger about the presence of sexism during the carnival. The barriers have fallen down, there are no limits, “on s’élâte” like one of my philosophy teachers said. If money ran the world ten years ago, now the trend is to substitute money for sex. Sex leads our world. I dare say that luckily, we have sexually transmitted diseases and especially AIDS to hold back the sexual vigour of certain individuals. I don’t want to pick on anyone in particular at the talent show, although if the shoe fits... I also admit that it was probably hard for the teams not to be vulgar because they had to follow what was written on their instruction sheet. For those who were not there, here is the script: Chaque équipe doit préparer une pièce de comédie basée sur le thème d’un poil meaning get naked, cette pièce doit durer un minimum de cinq minutes. Vous pouvez utiliser n’importe quel “prop” dont vous aurez besoin. For sure, it is not easy but still... I just want to remind you that the humorist who at the program “Just for laughs” have never needed to use sex or vulgarity and yet they always succeed at making millions of people laugh. At the talent show. “Sex lost the Contest” because using it to make people laugh is the easy way out and demonstrates a certain lack of imagination. Anyway...

The carnival was not bad in itself, it permitted us to relax. I also noticed that important social issues such as racism, the environment and “violence against women were touched upon. To conclude, if you find that my article is rude and vulgar, I dare say that you haven’t gotten out much lately.

Act now for peace
Sharon Lowry

January 17. A sea of perplexed eyes in small, serious faces. Canada is at war. One hand raised, tentatively. "Jessica?"

"I don't like war. My Grandpa was shot in a war. They had to cut his neck open with a knife to get the bullet out. That's why I can only sit on one of his knees but I can't sit on his other knee. You see, the person who shot my Grandpa made a mistake. They thought he was a bad guy."

E x a c t l y. T h e w h o l e psychology of war, summed up in one sentence by a six-year-old child. "They thought he was a bad guy". Good/Bad; Right/Wrong; Black/White. This is the propaganda making full use of these dichotomies.

At times, the whole war coverage seems like a fairy tale.

"Big Bad Wolf Hussein eats Grandma Kuwait, but Good Little Red Riding Hood U.S. and her little friends come to the rescue."

Is it really that simple?

It's time to stop hiding behind pat explanations of complex situations. It's time to stop justifying war with black/white thinking. It's time to examine the contradictions in our government's actions...and the contradictions in our own lives.

We need to start by questioning the use of violence to resolve conflicts. As the saying goes, "fighting for peace is like fucking for virginity."

Many students agree with this statement. We want to see an end to the violence in the Gulf and elsewhere, but we sometimes feel powerless to do anything about it. But there are some things we can do.

We can...

- Purchase non-violent products
- Educate ourselves
- Act politically
- Collaborate with others
- Express our views

In order to stop international violence, we can start by boycotting violent products at home. This includes violent books, movies, T.V. shows, games, children's toys, records, etc.

We can educate ourselves about the war (and about violence in general) through a variety of sources rather than relying solely on the media. We can attend teach-ins and have discussions on campus. We can concentrate on learning about "taboo" topics such as the history of the conflict in the Gulf, Middle Eastern perceptions of the conflict.

We can also influence political decisions through mobilizing public opinion against the war.

Political action can include attending demonstrations, rallies and marches for peace. It can include sit-ins in an MP's office, occupying a Canadian armed forces base, signing petitions, getting involved in peace organizations, such as the Toronto Disarmament Network (535-8673), or even better, making phone calls or writing letters to:

- The Right Honorable Brian Mulroney
  Prime Minister of Canada
  House of Commons
  Ottawa, Ontario
  K1A 0A6
  Phone: 613-995-4211
  Fax: 613-995-0101

  House of Commons

  Phone: 613-996-4450
  Fax: 613-993-6587
  Dept. Fax: 613-993-4452

To work for international peace, we can start by working for interpersonal peace. We can learn about methods of win-win negotiation and creative conflict resolution, and apply them to our everyday lives.

Herb Cohen's "You Can Negotiate Anything" and Edward de Bono's "Conflicts: A Better Way to Solve Them" are highly recommended books on negotiating.

Finally, we can express ourselves through the arts. We can use writing, art, drama, poetry, dance, music, and public speaking to make our voices heard for peace.

In acting for peace, we encourage others (especially kids) to do the same. The result is a snowball effect. Together we can make a difference. Let's do what we can while there's still time...so some day we will be able to have grandchildren...and we will have knees that they can sit on.

La guerre linguistique
Danielle Ritzes

Si l'on en croit le New-York Times du 27 janvier dernier les Français ont pris les armes! Non pas pour aller défendre le Koweit, tout le monde sait qu'ils y sont, mais pour défendre le droit aux accents! Rappelons que le gouvernement Rocard pour faciliter la vie des enfants et des étrangers qui se donnent le mal d'apprendre la langue de Molière, avait proposé à l'Académie française de modifier légèrement l'orthographe de certains mots pour qu'ils reflètent un peu plus leur prononciation ou pour faire plaisir à la logique cartésienne. Par exemple, selon la proposition Rocard, on n'écritrait plus événement mais événement et bonhomme, deviendrait bonhomme (car on écrit homme et non home). Selon cette nouvelle loi, les traités d'union devraient être retirés des mots empruntés tels que le grand et ce bonhomme mais rajoutés aux nombres supérieurs à cent. Ainsi 121 devrait désormais s'écrire cent-vingt-et-un. La forme du pluriel sera également changée pour certains mots, surtout ceux empruntés aux langues étrangères. Par exemple, jazzzman qui au pluriel deviendrait jazzzmans. Et le pluriel d'un match de foot ferait des matchs de foots.

En tout état de cause, en voyant paraître ces modifications au Journal officiel, le sens de certains écrivains dont Jean d'Ormesson et Françoise Sagan n'a fait qu'un tour. Comme un seul homme à moins que ce ne soit home, ils se sont mis à hurler à la mort si bien que les académiciens, tout immortels qu'ils soient ont fait volte face et ont retiré leur béniédiction aux changements. Cette simplification risque de compliquer bien des choses et entre autres le devoir des parents qui doivent aider leurs enfants à faire les leurs. De plus, de quel droit la France se permet-elle d'ôter un logo et pour toute la francophonie, d'aller dîner sans accent circonflexe? Avant que la guerre civile linguistique n'èteinte pour de bon. Claude Lévi-Strauss a fait une nouvelle proposition à laquelle la vénerable Académie s'est bien vite raccrochée: appliquer la loi du plus fort et laisser le choix aux usagers. L'avent, éloigné sans doute, retiendra la forme la plus utilisée. Je me demande si les immortels vivront assez longtemps pour voir le jour où ces formes seront fixées.

Au hit parade du racisme

Malu Bunny M.

Le parlement européen venait de publier une étude menée récemment sur la montée du racisme en Europe. La France, le Royaume-Uni, et l'Italie se trouvent être les trois pays les plus racistes de l'Europe.

Ce sinistre palmarès est le résultat de l'enquête édifiante que vient de publier le parlement européen, qui s'était fixé comme objectif l'étude des violences et provocations racistes et antisémites au sein des Douze.

Il y a, à priori, le racisme déclaré: Belges et Allemands, affirmait Glyn Ford, le chef des travailleurs Anglais au Parlement européen. Le bercouche des droits de l'Homme se distingue par le taux le plus élevé d'assassins racis: plus d'une vingtaine en quatre ans. Et aussi, soulignait la clémence dont la justice fait preuve vis-à-vis de leurs auteurs.

Le phénomène Le Pen en France a une grande responsabilité dans la flamme du racisme dans l'hexagone. Il a conféré une certaine légitimité au comportement raciste, en y introduisant des notions de défense de la Chrétiëté contre l'Islam, de fierté nationale, de principe naturel de priorité aux Français. Mais on remarque que la classe politique ne semble pas saisir le taureau par les cornes en ce qui concerne la mise en place d'une option politique en matière d'immigration afin de ralentir l'hostilité à l'égard des étrangers.

Au fil du rapport, les inquiétudes sont légion. On s'inquiète publiquement des connections entre les auteurs d'attentats racistes et la police.

Les "skinheads" et les policiers, tous affiliés au parti nationaliste français et Européen (PNFE) ou au syndicat d'extrême droite FPPE (Fédération Professionnelle Indépendante de la Police), font front commun.

Quant au Royaume-Uni, il est le champion de la violence racisté systémique. A Londres, la police enregistre quotidiennement plus de six incidents racistes, un record en la matière.

Dans certains quartiers de Londres et des grandes villes anglaises, les harcèlements et les violences à caractère raciste sont particulièrement fréquents, avec des menaces téléphoniques, affiches... Le plus aberrant est cependant le fait de la mise au point d'un jeu vidéo intitulé "Treblinka" par l'extrême droite locale. Les joueurs marquent des points en tuant des juifs, des turcs, des homosexuels, des écologistes!

"Quand le Gaz aura fait ses effets, vous aurez gagné", précise le règlement du jeu, qui a conquis un grand nombre d'adeptes en Suède et en Allemagne.

En Italie par contre, le racisme de masse est étroitement lié à l'Eglise. Certains clercs italiens sont à la pointe du combat. Entre d'autre les frères de Roveo lequel, l'Europe est depuis dix ans en voie d'islamisation; l'Italie risque d'être libanisée par ses immigrants.

Avec le conflit au Moyen-Orient, on peut déjà, chacun dans son petit monde, faire tranquillement les prévisions du racisme après la guerre du Golfe. Qui serait le meneur au top du hit parade prochain? Certainement pas des Afraikaners...

Work and study
A non-traditional approach

Rony Behar

Glendon students enrolling in the program will be required to take a half-credit orientation course, which is currently being offered during the winter session, in addition to two other work and study or GL/ WKST courses. There will be no extra credits for the work experience, only personal gain. Successful completion of this part of the programme will be reflected on the transcripts by a special coding pertaining to this matter.

Le professeur Keating explique que ce programme diffère des programmes travail/études traditionnels, qui sont plutôt considérés comme des coopéra-tives. L'originalité de ce programme réside dans le fait que les professeurs concernés doivent modifier leurs cours afin de les adapter à l'expérience professionnelle de l'étudiant. De plus, le contenu de cette expérience reste quand même académique. Mme Keating ajoute que la réussite de ce programme dépend entièrement de la réaction des étudiants et de la volonté des professeurs de faire ce travail d'adaptation supplémentaire. Elle demeure néanmoins optimiste et enthousiaste, et croit que tous les éléments pour aboutir à une réussite sont présents.

This program is still seeking approval from both the Faculty Council and the Senate Committee. If approved, it will commence in September 1991 with courses offered in the following departments: Psychology, History, Women Studies and Computer Science. In conclusion, Keating added that the beauty of this programme is that it can be extended to all of the departments at Glendon College.

Aide aux étudiants

Candace Heyward

Vous ne vous en sortez pas avec votre travail de 500 pages pour lundi? Vos notes de cours ressemblent à un message codé avec plein de blancs? Le Centre de consultation psychologique et d'orientation de Glendon peut vous aider. Des ateliers d'aide pratique vous aideront à mieux gérer votre temps de travail, à effectuer vos lectures plus efficacement, à prendre des notes plus utiles, et à préparer vos examens plus efficacement. Chaque session couvre un sujet différent et chaque participant reçoit, contre une somme minime pour couvrir le coût des photocopies, un ensemble de documents réalisés au sujet traité. Les ateliers ont lieu au Centre de consultation psychologique, au Manoir Glendon et durent une heure. Si vous désirez participer à un atelier, appelez le Centre de consultation au 487-6709, ou passez prendre un rendez-vous. Une heure de plus prise à votre emploi du temps si chargé peut en réalité changer beaucoup de choses et transformer votre frustration en une productivité calme et organisée.

A red success

Frederic Tremblay

Possibly the most important event of the Winter Carnival is the blood donor clinic, sponsored by the Red Cross. For this cause, the students of Glendon were really humane. This year was incontestably another success. The Red Cross collected 111 units, which represents 11 more than previously expected.

One unit of blood represents approximately a half of a liter. In total, 123 people gave at the blood clinic. From these, 12 people were refused for health reasons.

In an attempt to explain the enthusiasm of the students to the blood clinic, one of the Red Cross mentioned the war in the Gulf, "Many people talked about it", she said.
Amnesty at the Horseshoe

Lea Doxey

One of the most successful Glendon inspired events took place last Tuesday, February 5 at the Horseshoe Tavern. Co-sponsored by Glendon's Amnesty International and United Nations clubs the evening featured three bands. Covering almost every type of danceable sound imaginable were, The Ethnocentric Bubbleheads, The Buddha Pumpkins and the Hopping Penguins.

The evening began at 9:15pm with Amnesty members getting five minute salsa lessons to the pulsating rhythms of the Bubbleheads. Armando's purple leather pants really got the ladies jumping.

Following the Bubbleheads, the audience was treated to a crash course in Amnesty's history and mandate from public relations aide and all round great guy, Kevin Hogart, who was also M.C. for the evening.

Audience members were then treated to the New Orleans inspired sounds of the Pumpkins. A number of the band members also play with the Bourbon Tabernacle Choir so their lead singer Dave soon joined the Pumpkins on stage. In support of the cause, Pumpkin's singer Don kept interrupting their music to remind the audience of Amnesty's good deeds.

It was at this point in the evening that a number of Glendon females were seen in a distant corner with their mouths agape and fingers frantically pointing towards a nearby wall. Those who directed their eyes towards the commotion witnessed the live in the flesh appearance of Jeff Healey, alias Canada's number one guitar player. This was the moment that exhilarated organizer, Kerry LeClair, declared the event a success.

The final act of the evening is the one that got all of the sleeping audience members up off their seats. With their mixture of ska and reggae the Pumpkins made sure the dance floor at the Horseshoe was crammed shoulder to shoulder. Where else could you skank to the sounds of Canada's number one guitar player.

Where else could you skank to a band in which the lead singers sang in bare feet? La nuit était un succés.

Malencontreusement Gary la baterie de Penguins était déçu que Jeff Healey soit parti sans jouer.

La soirée n'aurait pas été possible sans deux mois de travail dévoué de la part de Robin Lord et Kerry LeClair. Il est trop tard que tels un petit pourcentage de onze cents dollars raisonnant was provided by Glendon students. Regardless, many thanks go to those Amnesty and U.N. members who helped out.

It is too bad that such a small portion of the over eight hundred dollars raised was provided by Glendon students. Regardless, many thanks go to those Amnesty and U.N. members who helped out and attended.

A big thanks goes to the staff and management of the Horseshoe Tavern for their patience and support (not to mention beverage supplies for the bands)! For now on to bigger and better things... next year Skydome!

On Thursday February 14, university and high school students across the country are mobilizing for a day of Action and protest to send a clear message to the government of Canada: students will not sit back and be complicit in their immoral and unjust war for oil in the Persian Gulf.

The Glendon Anti-War Coalition Contre la Guerre invites all students, staff, and faculty to participate in an open forum "Speak Out" and to publicly voice their concerns about the War.

Cet événement aura lieu à la cafetaria entre 11h00 et 13h00. Il y aura des lecteurs (étudiants et professeurs) dans un forum auquel tout le monde peut participer. Nous vous encourageons tous à venir exprimer vos opinions sur la guerre dans la Golfe. Il y aura également des musiciens qui joueront un "Folk Jam". Nous encourageons encore une fois votre participation.

Refuse to be Silenced! Speak out!
