VOLUME 33, NO. 1 LE 20 SEPTEMBRE 1993

AU DELÀ DES PROMESSES...

Etienne Le Beau

La salle du Sénat du Collège Glendon a ouvert ses portes, dimanche après-midi, aux cinq partis politiques fédéraux. Organisé par CBC et orchestré par Peter Mansbridge, ce débat télévisé lundi soir à Prime Time visait à enfin obtenir des réponses claires quant aux solutions pour régler l'un des pires problèmes auquel le Canada doit faire face aujourd'hui: le manque d'emplois.

C'est dans une atmosphère amicale que le public a essayé de tirer les vers du nez des invités afin de mieux comprendre leurs stratégies politiques et leurs solutions. Jean Charest, Paul Martin, Gilles Duceppe, Preston Manning et Dave Barrett étaient présents respectivement pour le Parti Conservateur, le Parti Libéral, le Bloc québécois, le Parti Reform et le NPD.

Jean Charest, qui s'est fait criblé de questions, prétend détenir la solution. Le plan d'attaque du Parti Conservateur est le suivant: privilégier les petites entreprises (les plus créatrices d'emplois), l'éducation, la recherche et le développement, continuer d'ouvrir les frontières au libre-échange et réduire le déficit et la dette. En simplifiant la TPS et en comblant les 300 000 postes ouverts grâce à une formation adéquate, le problème du chômage serait en théorie réglé. Sur cette question, une participante a fait la remarque suivante: "Your government has been there for nine years and nothing has been done".

Le libéral Paul Martin et son volumineux plan économique de 112 pages a rappelé que le but du Parti libéral était de retrouver une économie productive et ce, le plus rapidement possible. Des coupures gouvernementales, une meilleure formation des jeunes ainsi qu'une aide aux PME viendraient à bout du problème. L'argent nécessaire tomberait du ciel, puisque les Libéraux abattraient le contrat d'hélicoptère, en plus de développer une économie grandissante qui aiderait à remplir les coffres de l'état. Une participante du public a déclaré ne pas voir de différence entre le plan des Libéraux d'aujourd'hui et celui des années 30.

Enfin, Barrett, Manning et Duceppe ont eu beaucoup moins d'attention du public. Un parti NPD au pouvoir dirait non à l'ALENA (Acte de libre-échange Nord-américain) et créerait des emplois grâce à une économie souveraine et un plus grand capital au Canada. De son côté, Preston Manning s'est dit capable de réduire le déficit à 0 % en trois ans grâce aux coupures gouvernementales et à la réduction des taxes. Pour Gilles Duceppe, toute solution économique passe par la souveraineté du Québec.

Interrogé à la fin du débat, le public a manifesté son mécontentement face aux réponses des politiciens. Plusieurs d'entre eux ont dit ne voir aucune solution nette et précise émerger du débat, autre que des promesses électorales floues et parfois même irréalisables.

Il reste à espérer qu'après ce débat les électeurs canadiens iront voter de façon plus éclairée aux prochaines élections.

Barrett, Manning and Charest were seen around Glendon Campus yesterday in a filming of CBC Prime Time News to be aired tonight.

CHANGING FACES, CHANGING PLACES

Michele Ermuth

Each year brings hundreds of new faces to the campus, however, this year we must also say good-bye to two people who have greatly contributed to Glendon's well-being. Leon Wasser has already assumed his new post and Roseann Runte will be leaving July 1, 1994. Both should be thanked for their service and commitment to Glendon as a whole.

Leon Wasser was the business manager of Glendon College for four years. His duties varied, from linking Glendon with the main campus to helping ensure the cafeteria, residences and school buildings functioned smoothly. No one could ever forget his coming into residence with flashlights and blankets during the horrible weekend power outage in December of 1993. However, May 20, 1993 Leon Wasser became the mall manager of York Lanes at the main campus. No one has yet taken over his position here. Instead, his work has been delegated between posts at Glendon. Unlike before, the final say now comes from York Main Campus' Norman Crandles.

Since July 1, 1988, Glendon has benefitted from the appointment of Principal Roseann Runte. She has always strived to promote and reinforce Glendon's bilingual character by working closely with the staff and students. Since her arrival, we have had an increase in grants and contracts, and have been able to assist more foreign and out of province students who wish to experience life at our college. Unfortunately her five year term is now over and she has accepted an appointment as President of Victoria College, University of Toronto. Although no one has yet been named as her successor, there will be a Search Committee set up later in the year. Roseann Runte will always be remembered for opening her house to her students during study sessions and her reception before the annual Snow Ball.

Both Leon Wasser and Roseann Runte have made great contributions to the smooth running of Glendon College and they will be missed. Glendon's recognition as a national institution is mostly due to these two individuals. Good Luck and we wish you much success.

PRO TEM TURNS NASTY

Alexander E. Limion

With only hours left in summer, our thoughts turn to academics. The northern hemisphere turns faster (notice the early sunsets? - Ed.) as the leaves turn colour.

The reader turns the page - Pro Tem turns nasty.

Pro Tem holds meetings in the manor every Tuesday. These used to be pleasant get togethers. Not any more.

The main issue of last Tuesday's meeting was our membership in Canadian University Press. By an obscenely large margin (no dissenting votes), Pro Tem maintained its prospective membership with CUP.

CUP will give the paper a different feel with a topical, national, university-level (not to mention ill-tempered) press at its side.

Back at the meeting, things started to get really nasty. Much as we will enjoy the benefits of CUP membership, it's the rude newspaper staff who promise to make Pro Tem a truly uncivil newspaper.

Elections were held (grudginly) and the following positions were filled: Lorraine Hill as assistant editor, Russell Milon as sports editor, Cameron Fraser as entertainment editor, and Stephane Robichaud is this year's photography editor. This group doesn't offer seats to the elderly, seldom pats puppy dogs on the head, and never kisses little babies. These guys are nasty.

But to be a truly uncivil bilingual newspaper, on a besoin d'augmenter l'"impureté française". Le contenu de cette semaine est sans doute une infraction au mandat constitutionnel.

Le poste d'assistant-e à la rédaction est toujours vacant. Nous sommes à la recherche de quelqu'un qui a de l'expérience mais si tu t'intéresses beaucoup au journal et que tu es assez grossier et vulgaire nous prendrons ta demande en considération.

Nous n'augmenterons jamais le contenu français sans la participation de nos étudiants.

Eh oui, on a besoin de votre aide, mais on ne suggère pas que vous vous présentiez à nos bureaux (qui se trouvent, en passant, dans le manoir). Il y aura deux réunions cette semaine dont je vais quand même vous parler.

On Tuesday, our weekly meeting will be held at 6 p.m. This meeting is open to the public but fruit drinks and biscuits will be confiscated at the door.

Some might also want to join us Thursday. Between 10:30 a.m. and 5 p.m. an open house will be held with necrological bagpipe music and refreshments for all

IMPATIENT STUDENTS CAUSE DELAYS AT BANK

Michael F. Jursic

While waiting in line at my bank today, I contemplated the wisdom of an express line therein. All I had to do was get change for the laundromat, and I was waiting behind at least three students who were waiting to negotiate their OSAP loans. We all squirmed uncomfortably in line; two young women in front were talking loudly, pointedly to each other, saying they wished the tellers would hurry up and rustling their documents loudly.

Of course this annoyed me, and I said so to them, then as pointedly asked them if they wouldn't mind my moving to the head of the line because all I had to do was get change, and my laundry was sitting in the laundromat unguarded waiting for this transaction to take place. They didn't mind, taking it more good naturedly than I thought, but the lady in front of me did. I listened to her complain about all the students, and her rights... Twenty minutes later I had my eight dollars in quarters and made my return to the laundromat.

When it came time for me to negotiate my loan a couple of days later, I had some questions for the loans officer at my bank.

Seven working days is the minimum time in which student loans are being processed this year. Was it because of the snags in the new NDP policy, I asked. I was told that this has nothing to do with it. Instead, as I understand it, overall enrollment is up, which causes the system to be handling more than it was designed for, but the really surprising thing is that this was not the only reason for the delay. Students not familiar with the system tend to disregard the officer when he/she tells them that the loan will be in their accounts within three to five working days. They create a log jam of phone calls looking for their loans. (One student called four days in a row beginning the day after she negotiated her loan.)

This causes the bank to take people away from processing loans and use them to answer phonecalls from impatient students. My loans officer further told me that although it had happened in previous years, it had never been this bad, and it amounted to a self-sustaining problem, delays cause phone calls and phone calls cause delays.

Her advice...Listen to your loans officer when she tells you that your loan will be delayed, don't panic if it's not on time and try to have a little patience with the system. The only thing she would allow me to directly quote her on was this: "Please remember that we're only people too."

THE TERRY FOX RUN

Stephan Robichaud

9 AM Sunday morning. A breath of cold, crisp air awakens the runners as they stretch. This will be the first Terry Fox Run for some and the thirteenth for others.

I could give you a lot of numbers about cancer; like how many people it affects, age break-downs and all the other relevant statistics. But these types of numbers have a tendency to remove the human aspect of the disease. Cancer has a devastating effect that simply cannot be conveyed through numbers. We can understand this devastation clearly if we attempt to look through the eyes of one person.

Although I never had the opportunity to meet Terry Fox, I remember the iconographic image of him running down the TransCanada Highway in the pouring rain. I think of both the mental anguish he suffered and the pain his parents felt when Terry's life was ended by cancer. Yet I also remember Terry's enduring smile, through all his set-backs and pain.

I remind myself of all these images and emotions around the seventh, eighth and ninth kilometer. It is at this distance that I'm feeling 'pain' and I consider stopping. Terry's memory floods my thoughts, his desire to make it across Canada and how cancer prevented him from doing so. And then I ask myself how I can quit.

11 AM. The sun is warmer now. Bodies are scattered everywhere; some stretching on the grass, some talking and laughing, others appear to be sleeping. A fitting end to the day unfolds: a young child crosses the finish line with her mom.

I will continue to participate in the Terry Fox Run until a cure is found. Terry wouldn't have it any other way.

SECURITY AND YOU AT GLENDON

Michael Haberlin

Welcome back to Glendon!

Let me introduce myself. I am a Security Officer here on campus who occasionally writes for Protem about security matters. I and my fellow officers are here to help make this one of the safest campuses anywhere in Ontario, but to do this we need your help.

Along with Student Security, we patrol the grounds, do regular residence checks and keep our eyes open for any threat to the safety and security of the people living in and visiting each campus. Both Hilliard and Wood have porters on duty each night and they too contribute greatly to the security of the premises by screening people who enter the residences.

Security on campus is a very serious business and York University takes it very seriously.

Regular security is divided into four squads, with two officers in each one. We operate 24 hours a day, seven days a week, each and every day of the year. We patrol all parts of the campus on foot, by car and on bikes. Several of the officers have received advanced training on PACT (Pro-Active Cycle Team) an award winning crim prevention programme which has since been adopted in many universities and municipalities.

The department also offers specifically tailored crime prevention techniques such as street proofing for women. This particular program is a two and a half hour session designed to help women defend themselves against street crime. It offers several tips on how to avoid being selected as a victim. This is a free program available at the department.

If you are interested, get a small group together, contact the security office at 487-6808 or speak to your don if you are a resident and we will arrange a session for you and your group. (This program is not just for students, any staff or faculty member can arrange a street proofing session.)

It seems that every time we read the headline of a major daily paper, we are constantly confronted with dire news of more and more criminal activity. Unfortunately we live in a society where the crime rate seems to be high and on the rise. No community is immune, including Glendon.

Here are a few tips towards reducing the crime rate, protecting ourselves and our property:

- Never leave your room or office without locking the doors.
- Keep your wallet and valuables with you.
- Report suspicious people and activities.
- Always lock your vehicle and keep valuables out of sight.

Remember that crime occurs because there is an opportunity to commit an offense. Remove the opportunity and the risk is considerably reduced. That is why it is so important for Glendon residents to remember to lock your doors even if leaving your room for only a few minutes. All it takes is one minute to enter a room, swipe a wallet, a radio or a laptop. In and out, and it's all over in seconds. The same applies to office workers leaving their offices unlocked when they step out.

By following some basic safety tips, you are your own best crime prevention programme. If you have any questions or suggestions you can always contact the security office at Glendon 24 hours a day by calling 487-6808. Do not hesitate to call us in an emergency or if you see something that should be reported.

BIENVENUE AUX NOUVEAUX ÉTUDIANTS

Patrice Tremblay

Déjà une semaine de passée en 1993-94! J'espère que vous avez bien profité des activités offertes durant la semaine d'orientation.

Les commentaires que j'ai recueillis jusqu'à présent ont été excellents, surtout en ce qui concerne la course au trésor dans le centre-ville de Toronto.

La croisière sur le lac Ontario à bord du Northern Spirit connu un grand succès malgré la froide température - il faut dire que les esprits étaient quelque peu réchauffés...

La rentrée s'est quand même bien déroulée. À l'exception de quelques démarches inutiles au niveau de l'administration ainsi que quelques petits problèmes informatiques. L'aménagement en résidence s'est également effectué sans problème et je profite de l'occasion pour remercier tout le personnel de Glendon pour leur travail.

Vous avez sans doute déjà fait connaissance avec la nourriture de la cafétéria. J'ai l'impression que Weight Watchers ne fera pas fortune à Glendon contrairement à 241 Pizza. (dossier à suivre...)

Enfin, j'espère que vous avez autant de plaisir que j'en ai à découvrir Glendon et je vous souhaite tous une excellente année scolaire.

STUDENTS BECOME
LOAN GUINEA PIGS

Nick Vanweerdenburg

Toronto (CUP)- Two hundred University of Toronto students will test a controversial new type of student loan this fall.

The Ontario government is introducing the "Income Contingent Loans Pilot Project" which will run alongside the regular Ontario Student Assistance Program (OSAP). The program will award a total of 1000 loans whose monthly repayment amounts will depend on a student's income after graduation. Under the current system, repayment is calculated based solely on debt loan.

Under the pilot program, a graduate earning under $20,001 per year would not be required to repay anything. Graduates earning more would have to pay 4-6 percent of their income, depending on how much they earn.

Rick Martin, liaison officer for the University of Toronto Part Time Undergraduate Students and one of two student members on the five-person Ministerial Committee on Student Aid Reform, said he welcomes the experiment. "(It) was a step in the right direction."

"OSAP as a whole should be income-contingent," Martin added. "It is fairer and more equitable to students, and also makes more efficient use of government money."

While the pilot program is strongly supported by the Ontario Undergraduate Student Alliance (OUSA), it is opposed by all other student advocacy groups.

Uma Sarkar, president of the Arts and Science Students Union (ASSU) said the program would make university less accessible to lower income groups by increasing the amount students pay for their education and thus, their final debt.

"It's a pilot program now but it establishes a damaging precedent for students who have a problem with accessibility to post-secondary education. (It is) establishing a framework in which more of the burden is placed on the student."

Unlike the current system where the federal government pays the interest costs of a loan while a student is still attending school, under ICLRP the government would not cover interest payments. Interest would accumulate on the student's loan from the moment the loan is negotiated.

Sarkar said the removal of interest-free provisions while a student remains at school could drastically increase the cost of an education.

"Right now we pay 18-20 per cent of (the cost of) education," Sarkar said.

"With interest payment on the debt you could end up paying 40-50 per cent."

But according to Martin this is beneficial. He says the current program's interest-free period is effectively a partial write-off given to all loan recipients, irrespective of their ability to pay. Martin said under income-contingency, write-offs only go to students who need them.

Sarkar, however, pointed to the effects ICLRP has had in Australia, once the countries (along with New Zealand and Britain) that have similar problems.

Since the beginning of the Australian program the government has repeatedly lowered the amount of income graduates must earn to be exempt from repayment.

Ontario hasn't yet decided whether to run the experiment over one or two years. The maximum value of loans will be $2500 per year, or a maximum of $5,000 if a two year pilot project is undertaken.

FROM THE
PRINCIPAL'S OFFICE

As usual, we have been quite busy over the last few months. As you probably have noticed there have been quite a few moves and physical changes. These were made largely to accommodate the increase in the total numbers of students at the College and to offer them better service particularly in the area of the language and computing labs.

There have also been a fair number of staff changes and we wanted to keep you all up to date. There were fewer faculty changes. We still would like to welcome the new faculty and to wish all those returning from leave an excellent fall semester.

Physical changes:

The RISC Computer Laboratory for students was installed in A wing.

The multimedia computerized language laboratory was installed.

The Post Office and the Printing Services both moved to the ground floor York Hall, behind the Bistro.

Two new classrooms were also created on the ground floor of York Hall.

The Printing Services former locale became a classroom.

Liaison Services moved into the former Student Accounts offices, while Student Accounts moved into the former Post Office.

The Admissions Office moved into C108 York Hall while Donald Willmott moved into room C 136 York Hall.

The distance education equipment purchased with the regard to the Transition grant has been set up and is functioning.

Le Bureau des relations commerciales a été fermé mais Hospitalité Glendon va continuer ses opérations. Hélène Van Houtte en est la coordonnatrice.

Dans les départements d'informatique et de mathématiques, le poste de secrétaire administrative a été rempli par Heiderose Butscher.

Le bureau de la Faculté d'éducation, à Glendon, qui se trouvait au C130 du Pavillon York, a été fermé.

Au département d'anglais, Paraskevi Ilias est en congé jusqu'en 1994. Le poste de secrétaire du département a été affiché et sera rempli prochainement.

SPORTS

SO WHAT'S HAPPENED SINCE LAST SPRING?

HOCKEY

Leafs shine but Habs reign in 1993 NHL Playoffs. Thanks in large part to the exploits of the N.Y. Islanders, who eliminated the defending Stanley Cup Champion Pittsburgh Penguins, the Montréal Canadiens had a fairly easy 1993 playoff run. The opening round against the Québec Nordiques was somewhat difficult (the Habs won the series 4-2) the Canadiens never really had their backs up against the wall and did not once face elimination throughout the entire playoffs.

All this was made possible by the solid netminding of (now multimillionaire) Patrick Roy and by les Canadiens' amazing playoff overtime winning stretch. In the finals the Habs coasted to an easy 4-1 (games) victory over the over-tired and outclassed L.A. KINGS.

Meanwhile, The Toronto Maple Leafs enjoyed their best playoff run in twenty years and came to within a goal of facing les Canadiens in the finals. The Leafs were led by goalie Félix Potvin (now also a millionaire), Doug Gilmour and the team's inspirational leader Pat Burns.

BASEBALL

BLUE JAYS spend the summer in 1st- while John Olerud pursued a miracle. We don't know yet whether the defending World Series Champions will again allow or force this city to shut down for October, but they're doing their best.

The Toronto Blue Jays have led the American League's East Division for most of the season but now in mid-September the heat has been turned up on the Jays. Both the New-York Yankees and the Baltimore Orioles are putting on the pressure and one currently back 3 games behind Toronto. Once again the division will probably be decided on the last weekend of the season.

Moving on to the batting championship Toronto First Baseman John Olerud very nearly graced Major League Baseball with its second modern day .400 better.

Olerud's season has been amazing for a number of reasons, one being that this is only his third season. What one must also consider is that in his short career Jonh Olerud has never hit .300 let alone .400. Finally Olerud showed a poise and maturity far beyond his age as a dozen times during the season he fell below .400 and a dozen times he rebounded back above this nearby unattainable mark.

Unfortunately September saw him stay below .400. Currently Olerud is hitting around .370, but regardless of what his final batting average will be, he gave Toronto the opportunity to see what it takes to be a .400 hitter (for most of the season), as well as the Jays first Major League Batting Champion.

MOVIE REVIEW: HARD TARGET

Cameron Fraser

Is Jean Claude related to Billy Ray Cyrus or is it me? I mean look at that hair! Trêve de plaisanterie, Hard Target est vraiment un bon film d'action. Director John Woo, Hong Kong's Action Movie Guru creates a cornucopia of violence and destruction. But I especially liked the slow motion body pans of Jean Clamor's in-seam. This is the type of film that would really appeal to an American High School Football Team. If there is one word I can use to describe this film it is cheesy.

Now lets talk about the acting ... What acting ?!!! This movie has some heavy actors like Wilfred Brimley (Cocoon), and Lance Henriksen (Near Dark), I hoped that their expertise would rub off on Jean Claude, and newcomer Yance Butler, but their performances were all equally poor. My favorite actor in the film is Wilfrid Brimley, who is a student of the Kevin Costner School of Foreign Accents. His Cajun accent sucked! La plupart de ses dialogues étaient incompréhensibles. But I still love his oatmeal commercials.

Hard Target is a simple story of the overbearing rich taking advantage of the poor. L'action se passe en

Nouvelle Orléans. Fouchon (Henriksen), a millionaire man hunter, organizes groups of wealthy businessmen to hunt a selected war veteran who has survival abilities. Fouchon offers the vets $10,000 if they can escape the deadly game, and make it to the river. So basically that's it. Je vous laisse deviner le reste... Young beautiful girl searches for her father, and it turns out he is a victim of this deadly game. And then it's Van Damme to the rescue; lots of great fighting scenes, people dying, guns, guns, more guns... Au secours je vais être malade ...

But seriously, it is an action movie, and a good one, I just found it impossible to take this film seriously.

JUGHEAD COMES TO THE PUB

Andy McPhee

Anyone familiar with the Toronto nightclub scene cannot help but be familiar with JUGHEAD. The ten piece combo, consisting of guitar, banjo, mandolin, fiddle board, washtub bass (It's called a gut-bucket, says Glendon's own Mike Jursic, who plays it), spoons, harmonica, accordion, and jug, have wowed audiences in Southern Ontario with their unique blend of good time music, heavily influenced by bluegrass, thrash, grunge, country and punk.

Says singer Lopez Phillips, "It's about being Canadian, about taking traditional music and songs, and adding our own influences." They certainly do that; their repertoire is impressive, containing over eighty songs, from the traditional (Farewell to Nova Scotia), to the delightfully unexpected (a bluegrass version of Motorhead's Ace of Spades), to the original, including HOCKEY SONG, heard on Radio Glendon, among others, which is a hilarious look at what it is to be from Canada as seen through the eyes of people from all over the world.

Jughead can be seen in nightclubs around town, and are more than just worth seeing, as their large Glendon following will tell you. Because of this, Cafe de la terrasse manager Joanne Vidi is able to present them on Friday September 24th in the Pub.

MOVIE REVIEW: TRUE ROMANCE

Cameron Fraser

Premièrement, voyons la distribution : Christian Slater, Patricia Arquette, Dennis Hopper, Christopher Walken, Brad Pitt, Val Kilmer, Gary Oldman, Bronson Pinchot, and Michael Rapaport. How can you go wrong with a cast like this? Et pourtant, il y a quelque chose qui cloche dans ce film. Director Tony Scott (Top Gun), has created a modern love story, where, through many violent acts the chemistry between Slater and Arquette heats up on screen. However it is Scott's definition of modern love that I have a problem with.

Two lovers from very different backgrounds get caught up in whirlwind of crime and violence when they unexpectedly realize that they have a suitcase filled with cocaine in their possession.

La performance des acteurs est superbe, especially Dennis Hopper as a straight man, and Brad Pitt who plays the stoner roommate from hell. The real problem in the film lies with the hoaky love story that failed to convince me. En fait, c'est là le point faible du film. A prostitute paid to show Clarence (Christian Slater) a good time for his birthday, falls in love with him, and he with her, then they get married, after one night, in the first ten minutes... Yeah right, real believable. Sans parler de la fin qui est exacte - ment la même que celle utilisée par Quentin Tarantino (le scénariste) pour son précédent film Reservoir Dogs.

Now these problems are minor. I really enjoyed this film for its mixture of humor and action, but some may not be able to stomach the violence. Tarantino reveals his affinity with the world of organized crime, by creating brash characters who are unique in the sense that no matter how violent, they maintain a twisted quality of humanity.

The most powerful scene in the movie, is between Dennis Hopper and Christopher Walken. The tension created by these two actors, establishes the tone of the entire film, so watch this particular scene carefully.
