Le gouvernement provincial a créé un fonds spécial d’une valeur de 500 000 $ qui aidera les jeunes entrepreneurs francophones âgés de 18 à 29 ans à former des partenariats et à réaliser des projets de nature commerciale. Une copie du dépliant sur le fonds paraîtra dans les journaux de langue française dans les prochaines semaines.

Patricia Poulin, a Glendon student, was one of 20 young Canadians selected to receive the Canada Trust Scholarship for Outstanding Community Leadership. Poulin’s concern for people in her community through her involvement with the St. John Ambulance, a suicide prevention center and a peer support and guidance group, which she founded earned her the scholarship. Each Canada Trust Scholarship is valued at over $40,000 and includes full tuition for up to four years.

Recently, the Faculty of Education at York announced that the Concurrent Education program at Glendon was to be abolished. 29 Glendon students are currently enrolled in the program and over 100 apply each year. This decision was made without the consultation of the Glendon Administration or students. Continuation on page 3.
Let's just say that my grandfather died.

Tragic. But fortunately for me, I was his favourite grandson. "Fortune", because he was extremely wealthy, "Texas" (because I was the favourite) was entitled to a large amount of his estate.

Now in those days, I was an aggressive business minded 18-year old entrepreneur. Investing my time and money, I eventually established a little business making toys for little pre-schoolers. Not too bad, eh? I was doing pretty well for myself, eh? Using my deceased grandfather's money to make toys for little children made me think of my grandfather and how he used to play with me and my toys.

Now this little business of mine took off, like I meant TOOK OFF! Parents were buying my toys like there was no tomorrow. The fad of the 80's. So, being a business minded individual, I invested the money. A couple of factories and some specialized stores didn't cost too much money back then.

But I really liked the toys idea - putting smiles on kids faces and all - so I thought I would expand my market to cartoons and television. Since I had made a lot of money and was still continuing to do so, I thought I'd buy a television network. Now buying out a television network was a very simple task at that time since the market at that time was unstable (ie. the previous owners were going bankrupt at the time). At the end of it all, I ended up owning three linked networks as well as being a major shareholder in the other four major. In addition to this, the previous owners had sold me some radio stations. Now this wasn't too bad at all. I was doing pretty well for myself, eh? Thinking about this, in retrospect, I don't think I could do it all over again. It cost me so much money. Thank you. I am lucky. I was the first one to have thought of it. I was ready to have a party. And so I did.

I had an extremely large party and invited several presidents, prime ministers, some royalty, and other wealthy and influential figures (not to mention a couple of old friends, but not too many, I didn't want to look bad). Suprisingly, everyone I sent invitations to, came (or at least sent a delegate to attend). Everybody had heard of me and all the great work I had done and I felt really accomplished. I was doing pretty well for myself.

From this party, I had made a substantial amount of contacts, friends. Now one of these friends was heavily involved with newspaper and print media. He told me that we could put together our resources to completely run the entire media sector. This seemed like a good idea since I was making money from Myself already through advertising in My own television and radio stations, the entire newspaper and magazines just made sense. Not too bad eh grandpa? I was doing pretty well for Myself.

Then, a fairly young and enthusiastic employee of Mine (who reminded Me of Myself) came to me with a proposal. His name was Mike. He said that he could make me a lot of money from Myself already through advertising in My own television and radio stations, the entire newspaper and magazines just made sense. Not too bad eh grandpa? I was doing pretty well for Myself.

But everybody's got something in reference to a recent study that people are as congenial as you claim. I was ready to have a party. And so I did.

I had an extremely large party and invited several presidents, prime ministers, some royalty, and other wealthy and influential figures (not to mention a couple of old friends, but not too many, I didn't want to look bad). Suprisingly, everyone I sent invitations to, came (or at least sent a delegate to attend). Everybody had heard of me and all the great work I had done and I felt really accomplished. I was doing pretty well for myself.

From this party, I had made a substantial amount of contacts, friends. Now one of these friends was heavily involved with newspaper and print media. He told me that we could put together our resources to completely run the entire media sector. This seemed like a good idea since I was making money from Myself already through advertising in My own television and radio stations, the entire newspaper and magazines just made sense. Not too bad eh grandpa? I was doing pretty well for Myself.

Then, a fairly young and enthusiastic employee of Mine (who reminded Me of Myself) came to me with a proposal. His name was Mike. He said that he could make me a lot of money from Myself already through advertising in My own television and radio stations, the entire newspaper and magazines just made sense. Not too bad eh grandpa? I was doing pretty well for Myself.
Mr. Noble A. Villeneuve, Minister Responsible for Francophone Affairs said at the launch "This is an opportunity for us to encourage young Francophones to promote their skills and contribute to their region's economy."

An external committee will be formed to evaluate submissions and make recommendations. Approved projects will be funded on a variable cost-shared basis. The first deadline for submissions is November 15, 1997. Jean Watters, President of College Boreal commented "Ontario's young Francophones are ready to tackle the challenges they face in their career planning and job market integration: We must help them to realize their potential."

Mr. Villeneuve also suggested that the objective of the Fund is to recognize the true added value of French-language and bilingual resources in Ontario. A copy of the Fund flyer will be included in French-language newspapers within the next few weeks.

A new fund for young entrepreneurs launched

Continuation from News In Brief... A large percentage of the present Glendon population has been affected by the cancellation of the Concurrent Education program. Now Glendon students enrolled in the program must travel to the Keele Campus. Students living in residence have to use one of only three buses that leave Glendon every day.

Louise Lewin, Associate Principal, Recruitment and Student Affairs has commented to Pro Tem that the change was made. Therefore, students did not have the opportunity to make adjustments to their schedules in advance. Lewin said that the cancellation of the Concurrent Education program has and will continue to have a serious effect on Glendon. Not only will it reduce enrollment, but it will also mean that Glendon will lose many valuable members of the student community to other faculties at the Keele campus. Today the education, what will it be tomorrow?

"We must help them to realize their potential."
In only one paragraph, I have illuminated, for your reading pleasure, the first crucial step for all potential graduate studies applicants: The Telephone Olympics. This synopsis may appear simple, but if it does, it is deceivingly so. A few weeks ago, I managed to lose the greater part of a Friday because a telephone receiver was stuck to the side of my head. That was only the beginning.

I thought the phone calls would be a breeze. All I would have to do is dial and talk. In a reductive sense, yes, that is what I did. But, exponentially, the Olympics involve much more. First, for example, I had to find out what phone numbers to call. (Oh, what a strenuous task. I'll bet everyone's feeling sympathy pains now.) Some people at the Counselling and Career Centre kindly assisted me by providing a book listing all Canadian universities and their respective phone numbers. Sadly, when calling the numbers, most schools managed eventually to the strange voice in a strange province on the other end of the telephone line.

Eventually, my Friday of phone calls ended and within a few days, big brown envelopes began shooting through my mail slot. (I'm sure the letter carrier hates me.) I now have a pile of application packages that stand about as high as my bed and twice as wide. It is an extremely daunting stack of papers. Each envelope holds within it a secret, foreign world; a world in which I could be living by this time next year. And the most frightening aspect of this world is that it is my responsibility to learn all about it—especially how I might become an inhabitant— with the brown envelope as my only guide. Essentially, my future now depends on a big pile of paper. I guess I should keep flame out of my room for the next few months.

I am stuck. I have a grand pile of application packages, but nothing else. I don't, for example, know exactly what I want to study, but in order to apply, I must. Schools require (gasp!) a one page statement of intent from every student. I also don't know how to narrow down myself to an appropriate person whereby I would provide, as exemplified above, my vital statistics. Sometimes, though, I completely failed even to contact a real person (so if anyone in my reading audience has any information about applying to Dalhousie, please feel free to drop it off at the Pro Tem office).

I am extremely thankful that I am a Glendon student—at least my profs now know my name. But I'm still quite intimidated by the prospect of approaching them. It isn't very often (apart from the odd deadline extension request, that is) that students have to ask professors for favours. But, as everyone keeps assuring me, they're accustomed to it.

And they've no doubt had to make the same angst-ridden requests at some point in their academic careers. Yeah, that's the ticket. I'll approach the professors by appealing to the fact that at some point in their lives, they've been in the same torturous situation. Don't they want to help me out of mine? Perfect.

From where I stand, the process of applying to grad school seems impossible, but I know that it can't kill me (can it?). A panoply of eager undergraduates before me have survived the stressful task and now it is my turn. I am scrambling madly to solve the mysteries that present themselves to me as I travel the winding road of the grad school applicant. It is, I'm sure, a rite of passage that is meant to be more fulfilling than frustrating, but I have yet to reach that desired conclusion. Until I do, I will continue to write letters, send e-mails, read brochures, and make countless long distance telephone calls... "Stephanie. With a P-H. Steiglithom. S as in Sam, L-E-I, G-H-T, H-O-I-M as in Mary." I'm crossing my fingers for some sort of grad school epiphany. And I promise, if it happens, I'll let you know.

So I was running down a street in my neighbourhood the other day, as I often do, and I was subjected to a denigrating comment. Just like that, in broad daylight, by a construction worker. Now I'm not naïve; I often get stares from male passersby in cars, for example. But an actual verbal assault from an identifiable person who could not drive away?

Disgusted and caught unaware, I offered a short rebuke as I strode by, determined to continue enjoying an energizing autumn run in a beautifully treed neighbourhood. By the time I reached the end of the road however, I was seething. The mood was ruined and I was going to get back that carefree and independent feeling, so I headed for a long loop back to the site, full of adrenaline and angry responses to the "ungentleman".

As I neared the site, I was running strong. Chim up and straight-backed until I reached the caravan of parked trucks and equipment, where I then slowed to a walk. No use in giving him twice the satisfaction. I walked up to the small group of workers and proceeded to tell the offender that I was insulted by his remark, that I was going to report the company to the city (they were doing road work paid for by the public) and that he had ruined a damn fine run.

The contractor, hearing the protestations came over and inquired about the commotion, so I repeated what would be the first order on my agenda the following morning. He wasn’t happy but that’s too bad. It’s a sad fact that an employer would have to specifically warn his staff not to harass people while on the job, but then again, the construction business sort of has a reputation. Maybe the next time this employer will give his new employee (male or female), along with their hard hat and gloves, a reminder that sexual harassment is illegal and won’t be tolerated.

As for the future, I will seek a male running companion for protection from unwanted comments. Forgetting the time it happens, and if past experiences mean anything it will, I will tell them what it means to me and what I will do about it, and then leave them in my dust.
Perspectives

Student loans can't be released through bankruptcy for two years

By Jen Horsey

TORONTO (CUP) — Recent changes to legislation have added student loans to a short list of debts not released through bankruptcy.

Students declaring bankruptcy within two years of completing or discontinuing their studies will no longer be released from paying back their student loan debt unless they can successfully prove to the courts that special circumstances apply in their case.

NDP federal youth critic Libby Davies says she thinks it's outrageous that the government is singling out students for this special treatment, adding that this measure disregards the underlying problem of increasing student debt.

"I think it is totally discriminatory by singling students out and saying, 'You're not allowed to do this,'" she said.

Naomi Ridout, senior policy analyst for the Canada Student Loans Program, says the changes are made to help students who have to resort to bankruptcy to take care of their student loans.

According to Ridout, measures such as the six-month grace period after a student leaves school when they are not required to make payments on their loan, and the further 30 month period of interest relief address the problems students have with their student loan debts.

"We have protected students from the need to default on their loans," she said.

Ridout says she is concerned that students are declaring bankruptcy without considering other options, and she says the problem is that information about the loan program's flexibility is not getting out to students, or the private lending institutions that administer these loans.

But Jessica Yateman says she felt she had no choice but to default on her student loan, and she did so one week before the changes came into effect.

She was in school for two years, didn't have a degree, and had accumulated a debt of nearly $23,000.

Her job conducting market research studies didn't pay enough to cover her $300 monthly student loan payments and her future didn't look much better.

"I'm so young, I want something to look forward to," Yateman said, adding that over the next eight or nine years, her student loan payments would likely have prohibited her from investing in an RRSP, a car or a house.

Over the next nine months, her assets will be controlled by a trustee.

At the end of the court-mandated six months, she will be released from bankruptcy and has a chance to start over — almost.

For the next seven years, a record of her bankruptcy will burn her credit history, making it difficult to attain any credit.

Although government figures show that 90 per cent of students pay their loans off on time and in full, student bankruptcies have almost tripled since 1993, rising to 12,000 in 1996 from 4,500.

The high number of student bankruptcies is a sign the student debt is rising out of control, Randy Miller, vice-president external of the Memorial University student union, said.

"Don't know when they are going to realize students cannot pay off $45,000 debts," he said. "They can't do it."

"Progressive thinking would say, 'Gee all these students are declaring bankruptcy. It can't be just because they don't want to pay off their loans. It must be because they can't pay it off,'" he said. "So government turns around and instead of attacking the issue...they go the other way and say they're criminals."

Other debts which cannot be cleared by bankruptcy include fines imposed by courts, money owed for things stolen and alimony or maintenance payments.

With files from the Muse and the Varsity

Women's centre opposed to pro-life group on Memorial campus

By Kelli Kieley

ST. JOHN'S (CUP) — The possibility that a campus pro-life group may get full recognition from Memorial University's student union has raised concerns at the school's women's centre.

The student group MUN For Life is currently being recognized on a trial basis by the student union and will be eligible for full recognition during the winter semester.

During the trial period groups are allowed to operate on campus and establish a presence, though things like information booths. Once during the winter semester.

The student group MUN For Life, which promotes it on campus, "is the hardest decision a woman will ever have to make in her life," she said. "Nobody wants to have an abortion."

"When we have organizations that put pressure and more strain on these women who are already undergoing enormous strain and stress, it's really scary for them," says Williams.

Williams says student union support for the group will reinforce the negative associations society already attaches to abortion. "There is a lot of stigma attached to abortion in our society and we don't need a group that promotes it on campus," she said. "It doesn't create an atmosphere for choice. The university should not promote biases that exist in our culture."

Mike Down, president of MUN For Life, says his group does not condemn women who have chosen to have an abortion.

"Our group is totally non-condemnatory and non-judgmental," he said. "Any woman who has had an abortion...if we can help them with other things, we would be happy to do whatever we can to provide her with the help she needs."

Down says MUN For Life is primarily interested in helping deserving groups that support pro-life policies.

For Life has a right to form on campus, student union vice-president Karen Kieley says, as long as they do not attempt to counsel students on abortion matters.

"Within Canadian democracy, everybody has the right of free speech," she said.

Kieley says when the union first debated whether to grant MUN For Life status, there was a fair amount of disagreement on the issue.

"There was a lot of debate on the union as to whether or not this would be a good thing for the university, and I think that right now MUN For Life does have to prove to students on campus that it is a worthwhile group and that it deserves a place in the university community," she said.

Kieley adds that she hopes MUN For Life will not focus strictly on anti-abortion issues.

"The women's centre is also wary of the pro-life group because of literature it distributed on campus last winter that it says contained inaccurate information and provoked guilt."

Entitled "Should Rape be an Argument for Abortion?" the pamphlet indicated that there have never been any reports of pregnancy resulting from rape.

"The possibility of pregnancy is reduced even more by the severe stress reaction associated with rape," the pamphlet read in part.

Meanwhile the announcement has raised concerns at the University Women's Resource Centre, which said in a statement released later in the week that it says contained inaccurate information and provoked guilt.

"Within our society and we don't need a group that promotes it on campus," a spokesperson for the Memorial University Women's Resource Centre, said.

"This is the hardest decision a woman will ever have to make in her life," she said. "Nobody wants to have an abortion."

"We have protected students from the need to default on their loans," she said.

Ridout says she is concerned that students are declaring bankruptcy without considering other options, and she says the problem is that information about the loan program's flexibility is not getting out to students, or the private lending institutions that administer these loans.

But Jessica Yateman says she felt she had no choice but to default on her student loan, and she did so one week before the changes came into effect.

She was in school for two years, didn't have a degree, and had accumulated a debt of nearly $23,000.

Her job conducting market research studies didn't pay enough to cover her $300 monthly student loan payments and her future didn't look much better.

"I'm so young, I want something to look forward to," Yateman said, adding that over the next eight or nine years, her student loan payments would likely have prohibited her from investing in an RRSP, a car or a house.

Over the next nine months, her assets will be controlled by a trustee.

At the end of the court-mandated six months, she will be released from bankruptcy and has a chance to start over — almost.

For the next seven years, a record of her bankruptcy will burn her credit history, making it difficult to attain any credit.

Although government figures show that 90 per cent of students pay their loans off on time and in full, student bankruptcies have almost tripled since 1993, rising to 12,000 in 1996 from 4,500.

The high number of student bankruptcies is a sign the student debt is rising out of control, Randy Miller, vice-president external of the Memorial University student union, said.

"Don't know when they are going to realize students cannot pay off $45,000 debts," he said. "They can't do it."

"Progressive thinking would say, "Gee all these students are declaring bankruptcy. It can't be just because they don't want to pay off their loans. It must be because they can't pay it off,"" he said. "So government turns around and instead of attacking the issue...they go the other way and say they're criminals."

Other debts which cannot be cleared by bankruptcy include fines imposed by courts, money owed for things stolen and alimony or maintenance payments.

With files from the Muse and the Varsity

Three university football players test positive for steroids

By Rachel Furey

TORONTO (CUP) — Three Canadian university football players have been forced to hang up their cleats after testing positive for steroids.

Mathieu Demers of the Saint Mary's Huskies, Shawn Dyson of the Waterloo Warriors and Constain Shousha of the Ottawa Gee-Gees were all tested during random, unannounced sessions in September. All three have admitted to using steroids and have waived their right to a second test.

The Canadian Interuniversity Athletic Union announced on Monday that each player had been suspended for a period of no less than four years.

"I made the mistake because I was impatient to reach the top, I regret it and I must now live with my decision," he said. "I am human and I wanted to be the best. I am sorry," Demers said in a statement released later in the week.

Since 1990, approximately 2,250 drug tests have been conducted and 20 athletes have tested positive. All but one of the cases involved a football player and steroid use.

With these latest infractions, the preventative measures used to keep players from taking steroids are being called into question.

"With three players (testing positive) in the same week, there's something wrong," Luc Gelineau, University of Ottawa athletics director, said.

The CIAU currently conducts mandatory drug education seminars for all athletes each year. Players must sign a form to indicate they've read and understood the union's zero tolerance policy on drug use.

In light of the recent tests the CIAU will meet with the schools involved and with the Canadian Conference Athletic in Sport to examine what more can be done, Diane St-Denis, CIAU director of events and programs, said.

"Perhaps there's another strategy we can use to get the message across," she said.

While this may sit well with Gelineau, who wants to develop a method for monitoring athletes during the off-season, others say the current standards are strict enough.

"We've already done so much," said Larry Utech, head coach of the Saint Mary's Huskies, said. "I believe we need a severe penalty, [II support the rules and sanctions, but how big of a hammer do you need?"

Meanwhile the announcement has hit hard at the University of Waterloo where the suspended player, Dyson, was the team's captain.

"This is the second time it has happened at Waterloo in the past five years. It's extremely disappointing," said Judy McCrae, director of athletics at the University of Waterloo.

Dyson, a fifth-year science student, told his coach that he took the steroids "to get an edge" for a Canadian Football League training camp he was invited to attend in Calgary.

All three players told their coaches they didn't expect to test positive for the banned substance.

"[Shousha] was told by his supplier the drug would be out of his system and he was shocked to see that it was still there," said Gelineau.
Most of us have had the knowledge of the birds and the bees for quite some time now; some of us have more knowledge about the subject than others. Wherever you fall in the spectrum, it is never a bad idea to introduce/brush up on the ideas and facts that influence every aspect of our society. So for both the sex-ed virgins (excuse the pun!) and those guys and gals who know it all, welcome everyone to the Sex-Files, because remember folks, the cliche is true: knowledge is power.

FACT #1
If the tightly coiled seminferous tubules (which produce the male sperm) were stretched, they would extend one to three feet in length.

FACT #2
The Cowper's gland also contains a small number of sperm, and this pre-ejaculatory fluid can impregnate a woman, even if the man withdraws before ejaculation takes place.

FACT #3
Not all sperm race to fertilize the eggs. There are three varieties of sperm. While the first attempts to reach the egg for the purpose of fertilization, the second links with other sperm of its sort to form a barrier or wall against foreign sperm. The third acts as a sort of warrior sperm, trying to seek out and destroy other men's sperm.

FACT #4
The average menstrual cycle lasts 28 days, with a normal range of 21-35 days. The first menstrual day is numbered as Day 1. Ovulation occurs approximately on day 14 of the 28 day cycle.

FACT #5
Women do not urinate out of their vaginas as many men believe, but out of a third opening called the urinary opening, which connects to the urethra, acting as a carrier for urine as in the male urethra.

FACT #6
Many women (and men) expect the first intercourse to be painful because they fear the breaking of the hymen, but such pain most likely results because the female is anxious and un prepared, or the male's penetration is clumsy or forced, not the breaking of the hymen.

MALE

Tests: the testes are egg shaped structures located in the scrotum/sac and is where sperm and hormones are produced. The testes are outside the body as opposed to inside the abdominal cavity because it is cooler and higher, hotter temperatures would destroy the sperm. The sperm is produced inside the testes in the seminiferous tubules.

Epididymis: The epididymus beside the testes acts like a storage unit for sperm before it is ejected in the process of ejaculation. Its smooth walls contract during ejaculation and moves the sperm into a connecting tube, or vas deferens.

Vas deferens: It is in the two vas deferens where sperm combines with fluid from the prostate gland to produce the semen that enters the urethra.

Urethra: The male urethra serves a double purpose. Like the female urethra it functions as a carrier of urine but uniquely, the male urethra also serves as a carrier of sperm during ejaculation.

Semen: The average male ejaculate contains from 200 to 400 million sperm, though these account for only 1% of the total volume of the semen. Semen contains fluid from the epididymus, the seminal vesicles, the prostate gland, and the Cowper's gland. These glands help neutralize the acidity of the urine in the urethra, making it possible for the sperm to survive and be mobile.
Case No. 69

Ovaries: Ovaries are oval-shaped organs hugged by the ends of the fallopian tubes. The ovaries are the female counterpart to the male testes, both producing reproductive cells (in the case of the ovaries, they produce eggs/ova) and both secrete hormones. It is here in the ovaries that the ovarian follicles are found (230,000-400,000 of them at birth), each with an immature egg in their centre, and from puberty to menopause usually one is released each month into the fallopian tube.

Fallopian Tubes: The fallopian tubes are connected to the uterus. When the ovary releases an egg, it enters the fallopian tube and its cilia (hairlike structures) guide the egg through the tube, into the uterus. The fallopian tube also assists the journey of the egg with contractions used to move the egg along. It is here in the fallopian tubes, near the entrance closest to the ovaries where fertilization takes place between the egg and the sperm.

Uterus: The uterus is located in the pelvic cavity between the bladder and the rectum. The walls of the uterus are partially composed of smooth muscles that contract during orgasm, childbirth, and menstruation.

Cervix: The cervix is at the lower end of the uterus extending into the vagina. It is here in the cervix through a small opening or mouth (the os) that the sperm can enter the uterus to make their way to the fallopian tubes to find the egg. This mouth/os is also the opening in which childbirth takes place, stretching to its size through which the baby can fit. The mouth/os is also the site where the eager sperm meet one of their many hurdles. Mucous plugs the entrance of the cervix and forms a barrier for the sperm for most of the monthly menstrual cycle, only thinning and becoming permeable during ovulation, which occurs on day 14 of the 28 day cycle.

Vagina: The vagina is a tube extending from the uterus to the external opening (the introitus).

Labia: Labia Majora: the outer lips covering the external genitalia; akin to the scrotum; Labia Minora: the inner lips; the inner covering of the entrance to the vagina.

Clitoris: The clitoris is composed of two small erectile, cavernous bodies enclosed in a fibrous membrane and ending in a gland (an exposed head; the counterpart to the male penis gland/for head). Like the penis gland the clitoris is intensely, erotically sensitive.

To feel comfortable and in control of one’s self, one should know how his/her body works. To have sexual intercourse and to enjoy it makes this knowledge a necessity. Men and women alike should delve into the mysterious body to understand theirs and each other’s temples, and more importantly perhaps even understand each other in the process.

FEMALE

FACT #7
Menstrual cramps are caused by chemical substances called prostaglandins, that produce contractions of the smooth muscles of the uterus.

FACT #8
Disease-causing organisms can be transmitted during all acts of sex, including anal and oral sex.

FACT #9
Achieving orgasm involves both physical and psychological factors.

FACT #10
Some females are born with a partial or no hymen. Hymen: a membrane found only in human females that covers the opening of the vagina at birth.

FACT #11
The female reproductive system undergoes only two processes, menstruation and childbirth, exclusive to the female. All other physiological processes are shared in common between the sexes.

FACT #12
The earliest aphrodisiacs were certain edible foods thought to resemble human sex organs: clams, oysters, bananas, rhino horns, etc.

---

Case No. 69

Ovaries: Ovaries are oval-shaped organs hugged by the ends of the fallopian tubes. The ovaries are the female counterpart to the male testes, both producing reproductive cells (in the case of the ovaries, they produce eggs/ova) and both secrete hormones. It is here in the ovaries that the ovarian follicles are found (230,000-400,000 of them at birth), each with an immature egg in their centre, and from puberty to menopause usually one is released each month into the fallopian tube.

Fallopian Tubes: The fallopian tubes are connected to the uterus. When the ovary releases an egg, it enters the fallopian tube and its cilia (hairlike structures) guide the egg through the tube, into the uterus. The fallopian tube also assists the journey of the egg with contractions used to move the egg along. It is here in the fallopian tubes, near the entrance closest to the ovaries where fertilization takes place between the egg and the sperm.

Uterus: The uterus is located in the pelvic cavity between the bladder and the rectum. The walls of the uterus are partially composed of smooth muscles that contract during orgasm, childbirth, and menstruation.

Cervix: The cervix is at the lower end of the uterus extending into the vagina. It is here in the cervix through a small opening or mouth (the os) that the sperm can enter the uterus to make their way to the fallopian tubes to find the egg. This mouth/os is also the opening in which childbirth takes place, stretching to its size through which the baby can fit. The mouth/os is also the site where the eager sperm meet one of their many hurdles. Mucous plugs the entrance of the cervix and forms a barrier for the sperm for most of the monthly menstrual cycle, only thinning and becoming permeable during ovulation, which occurs on day 14 of the 28 day cycle.

Vagina: The vagina is a tube extending from the uterus to the external opening (the introitus).

Labia: Labia Majora: the outer lips covering the external genitalia; akin to the scrotum; Labia Minora: the inner lips; the inner covering of the entrance to the vagina.

Clitoris: The clitoris is composed of two small erectile, cavernous bodies enclosed in a fibrous membrane and ending in a gland (an exposed head; the counterpart to the male penis gland/for head). Like the penis gland the clitoris is intensely, erotically sensitive.

To feel comfortable and in control of one’s self, one should know how his/her body works. To have sexual intercourse and to enjoy it makes this knowledge a necessity. Men and women alike should delve into the mysterious body to understand theirs and each other’s temples, and more importantly perhaps even understand each other in the process.

FACT #7
Menstrual cramps are caused by chemical substances called prostaglandins, that produce contractions of the smooth muscles of the uterus.

FACT #8
Disease-causing organisms can be transmitted during all acts of sex, including anal and oral sex.

FACT #9
Achieving orgasm involves both physical and psychological factors.

FACT #10
Some females are born with a partial or no hymen. Hymen: a membrane found only in human females that covers the opening of the vagina at birth.

FACT #11
The female reproductive system undergoes only two processes, menstruation and childbirth, exclusive to the female. All other physiological processes are shared in common between the sexes.

FACT #12
The earliest aphrodisiacs were certain edible foods thought to resemble human sex organs: clams, oysters, bananas, rhino horns, etc.

DISCLAIMER: Not a professional opinion, not the opinion of the editors.

PROBLEM: I am a student at Glendon who has been really let down by a former friend. You see, last year she was really great to hang out with and this year she has become rude and mean. I don’t want to stop hanging out with her because we have had many great times together, yet I can’t be around someone who is obnoxious for very long.

SHE: Sounds to me like you already have your answer about this ex-friend. Who wants to hang out with someone that is rude to others? Not me that’s for sure, and I don’t think you do either. It’s hard coming to terms with the fact that someone you thought you knew has changed or really isn’t the person you thought they were. I’d say that before you let this friend move on you might want to talk the situation over. Find out what’s different about them, and then make a decision whether you want to stay or move the friendship to the next gear!

HE: Drop her like a bad habit! I’m sorry, but anyone who doesn’t treat you the way you think you deserve to be treated isn’t worth the time of day - at least not mine anyways. Some people just have too much time on their hands and find it fun to be mean and obnoxious. One word: LOSER!

PROBLEM: I’m in my second year of study, at Glendon, and I’m concerned about Law School. I’m not sure how to go about applying and the various processes involved. I realize this is not a conventional question or problem but I’m stumped. Do you have any knowledge on this subject?

SHE: As a matter of fact I do happen to know a bit on this subject. But I’m sure as to exactly what you are asking. If your concern is what it takes to get in, it depends on where you are applying but basically you need a ‘B’ average. For places like Osagoode or McGill you need a solid ‘A’. You should go to the Counselling centre and pick up the L-SAT (Law School Admissions Test) booklet and get moving on taking the test A.S.A.P., because you can rewrite it if you don’t do so well. After the test you can apply to schools wherever you wish, however it is very costly to apply. Keep your marks up, and the year before you want to attend Law School you should inform yourself about the schools even more.

HE: Good thing there is a ‘SHE’ in He Said, She Said because don’t have a clue.

PROBLEM: My boyfriend is addicted to TV. More specifically to wrestling and channel 30, TSN. It drives me crazy, when the TV is on I don’t exist. I swear I could run around screaming “Fire” and he wouldn’t even flinch. How is this fair? I never ignore him especially not for anything as trivial as baseball. Does this mean he lacks interest in me?

SHE: Honey, I completely understand where you’re coming from. I’ve had a few fights myself about ‘Bad Blood’ and The Blue Jays with my boyfriend. All I can say is, yes, it is frustrating when you think ‘Steve Austin’ is more interesting to your boyfriend then you are, but the truth is, it’s sorry to say but guys need that macho stuff to feel like real guys. Don’t take it personally, just live with it and try to show interests in what he likes and ou’ll find thin s will chan e.

HE: I disagree. When you are concentrating on something, do you not put 100% of your mind into it? If you are following a sports team or the storyline of a soap do you not like to follow it as much as possible? Whether you follow baseball, golf or ballet, people, male or female, are going to devote some attention to it. I don’t know to what extent your boyfriend ignores you, but personally my girlfriend has shown interest in some of the sports that I enjoy and that has really made baseball games a lot more interesting and fun. Try and show interests in what he likes and you’ll find things will change.
My man Busta Bust about to do his thang

by LOKE

"Like those West Coast Niggas who be throwin up signs/I hate a Busta, unless he's Busta Rhymes.

Tired of all that Gangsta bizness, the above Don core found somewhere on De La Soul's, Stakes is High L.P., best demonstrates the "much love" Hip

Hop heads have for each other in giving props to those for whom its due. This certainly holds true for Busta, a name synonymous with a) member of the defunct-for-now yet eternally funky Hip Hop group, Leaders of the New School; b) one of the illest-on-some-next-"ultrasonic" shit MC's in all the world; c) aficionado of all but the sickest Martial Arts movies ever made; and d) smoker of mada-blunts—hey, we all need inspiration once in a while. How you may ask do I know all these seedy somewhat private details of a Long Island b-Boy who made good and yet managed to keep everything raw? I got the chance to meet the madman* "a*, da's why!! The scene: the Sutton Place Hotel. The scenario: twenty-odd journalists such as myself squaring off against Busta and crew (note: no blunts where sparked and passed around during or after the interview).

The obvious first question is asked, "What is Busta Rhymes up to these days?"

The very articulate dead-locked rasta replies, "In constant motion... always into something... Busta never sleeps! I finished the new album (When Disaster Strikes) in five months and shot the video for the single (Put Your Hands Where My Eyes Could See). I don't have time to rest. I'm already five tracks into my next album! Five tracks!! It's gonna be called The Final World Front.

The next questions all dealt with the use of Puff on his album, which should have been avoided since I tend to think that any MC as ill as Busta doesn't need any Amos 'n' Andy entertainer like Sean "Puffy" Comb's to sell records. I tend to view this Bad Boy popularity as a regurgitation of the "glam rock" bullshit of the 80's, which deprived millions of thoughtless teenagers from their senses into buying really empty music. As expected, Busta offered his own unique perspective on the matter, "Puff's an entertainer, and in everyone's biggin out over it, the way I saw it was 'f*ck it' he owed me, bottomline...."

When asked about all the generic junk Puff spits out in his lyrics, Busta was really straight-up, "I'm not one to say that Puff should apply himself as an MC. It's all about how you take the music... Personally, I don't go into a club and buy a three-hundred dollar bottle drink at the bar. That's stupid, word...That's why my health is bangin' cuz I ain't drunk all day!!

I asked Busta what kind of impact his music has on heads? "It's like in a fight when you get all pumped and I hit you and bust your shit. I'm past those days of fightin'...I'd rather bust your shit wit my music so you'll feel the same effect like when you get hit... Impact extremely, like when kids are in a club and who wrecks twenty warriors with Tai Chi. Mr. Rhymes also enjoys Japanese Ninja Scroll, clever and ill flows, and the slow burn of a Red Leaf cigar rollie. In a world that has become a wave of regurgitated anthems and hits of years past, laced with mundane lyrics and sing-along choruses, the rap game still maintains its impact thanks to the realness of MC's like Busta Rhymes.

Pay attention to Sister

Jane Gorley

Late Night Catechism is a one-woman performance that blurs the line between theatre and night school as a nun called Sister, played by Maripat Donovan, leads a mock night class in Catholicism.

The appropriate venue for this production, Holy Trinity Church, holds a simple set resembling a primary school classroom. The "night school for adults" premise is made clear right from the beginning as Sister gives possible reasons that She also informs that the term "immaculate conception" does not refer to Jesus' conception, but to Mary's conception in her mother's womb. The delivery of these fascinating facts is peppered with witty comments that reveal Donovan's talent for improvisation, but also suggest that she has probably come across every possible interaction with her numerous audiences during the impressively long runs of the show in other cities. It takes a pseudo-masochistic person to enjoy the type of comedy that brings back memories of childhood humiliation and the authoritarian teachers that we all have experienced at one time, and to want to risk reliving those experiences. But if you're good at blending into the crowd and enjoy watching other people get embarrassed, Late Night Catechism will appeal to you, regardless of your religion or lack thereof.

Ticket prices range from $29.50 to $39.50 and can be purchased by calling (416) 872-1111 or (416) 348-0696. Performances are from Wednesdays to Sundays, and the show is running indefinitely.
In the last four years or so, the area along College St. - which starts at about Bathurst St. and continues to Clinton St. (near CHIN Radio) - has experienced dynamic change. This small community, part of greater Little Italy, had been developed by the Italian immigrants who came to Canada in the fifties. It helps to make Little Italy such a unique experience in Toronto.

Many of the original inhabitants have moved north of Toronto, so the community has changed - it has become more cosmopolitan. A gradual shift is noticeable as you walk from Spadina along College towards Little Italy. You’ll notice the bustle of Chinese Market atmosphere - here and there alleyways such as Croft St., Church, the old Fire Station number 8, the Portuguese Seventh Day church, the old Fire Station number 92, and there a German Evangelical-Lutheran church, the old Fire Station number 18, the Portuguese Seventh Day Adventist Church, the Latvian House etc... You’ll see interesting alleyways such as Croft St., residential streets such as Euclid Ave: the characteristic architecture sits unscathed and overgrowing with vines, oddly mixed with the new structures that have been added. The old neighbourhoods that are so typical of Toronto just sitting on the edge of College St. is Lively, Wild Toronto - of Toronto just sitting on the edge of College St.

You’ll start to notice, especially if you’re there at night, that the area is lively and crowded, and that there are a lot of restaurants, bars and cafés. Such variety makes for quite an interesting experience if you’re new to the area, or if you’ve haven’t been there for a while. It’s an area that’s usually something to be discovered. The area attracts a lively mix of people coming from all over Toronto and abroad; students, new age type yuppies and people in the 20-35 age group. Recently young Italians have rediscovered old haunts, such as Bar Italia. The owner of Corso Italia (next door to Bar Italia) says that he used to come to the area with his father in the sixties, and that people come from as far as Woodbridge for a night out. Once mainly patronized by locals, the area now attracts people looking for the dynamism that this street offers.

Even in the last eight months changes have been noticeable. For example, "El Bodegon", which specializes in Peruvian cuisine, once resembled a cafeteria, and the clientele were local regulars. You could walk in on a Saturday night and be seated without a problem. Recently, looking for a reliable place on a busy Saturday night, I expected to find the same old "El Bodegon". Although we had to wait fifteen minutes to get in, we didn’t regret it. The place hardly looks like a cafeteria now: a patio now flanks the side of the restaurant, and the whole interior has been redecorated, fitting in with College Street's cosmopolitan attitude. It still maintains its individuality though, and the menu has not compromised the general theme of the old menu; you can still get the beef heart, and bread on the side with a Peruvian salsa that will burn your mouth to hell.

Here are some other places that I suggest you try:

COOL CAFES:

- UTOPIA CAFE 581 COLLEGE, 534-7951
  - APPETIZERS: $1.75-$4.95, SALADS: $3.50-$8.99, SANDWICHES: $3.75-$5.25, MACARONI: $3.25-$7.25, ENTREES: $3.50-$14.95
- CAFE DIPLOMATICO (RESTAURANT & PIZZERIA) 596 COLLEGE, 534-6477
  - OFFERS MAINLY ITALIAN FOOD, TUSCAN SPACIOUS RESTAURANT IS OPEN, MIXED CLIENTELE WITH A Laid Back Atmosphere.
  - BREAKFAST ($-3-1 LAM): $3.75-$5.40, AntiPasti: $2.95-$5.50, MUFFIN: $1.50-$2.50, SAUSAGES: $2.75-$3.50, PROSCIUTTO: $3.50-$5.25, CAKE: $3.50-$5.25, PIZZA: $3.50-$5.95, PASTA: $3.50-$6.95
- EDENWOOD CAFE 641 COLLEGE, 634-6277
  - DINNER EVERY NIGHT 11PM, CAFe MEAL 2AM, "KILLER COFFEE & SODAS", STARTERS $2.50-$7.95, SPECIALS $3.50-$19.55
  - "STUPENDOUS BRUNCH WEEKENDS" 10-4PM

CHEAP DRINKS

- SNEAKY DICKS 431 COLLEGE, 607-3190
  - CHEAP PICKERS, USUALLY, AND GOOD TEXT MEX FOOD
  - LIVE MUSIC/SUPERBARS CHECK FOR FREE ENTRY UPSTAIRS (USUALLY WEEKDAYS)
- BOMB 432 COLLEGE, 943-8416
  - T-R E M P T Y C E A P B E E R.

RESTAURANTS/BRASSERIES:

- PONY 585 COLLEGE, 724-7665
  - INTERNATIONAL CUISINE IN A VERY APPEALING MODERN, MODESTLY DECORATED RESTAURANT. STARTERS: $3.50-$8.25, MAINS: $13.95-$14.95, VEGETARIAN STARTERS: $3.95-$8.95, MAIN: $12.50-$13.50
  - THE MONTREAL WEST 582 COLLEGE, 724-1952
  - ONE OF THE MOST APPEALING PLACES IN T.O.

- KALOMIDIS KOFFEE HOUSE 566 COLLEGE, 823-4172
  - ONE OF THE MOST APPEALING PLACES IN T.O.
  - THE BAR AND WAITING STAFF ARE FRIENDLY YET DISCREET.
  - IF YOU HAVE A DISCUSSION OR A DATE, IT'S A GOOD PLACE TO HAVE A DISCUSSION OR A DATE.
  - INTERNATIONAL MENU, SOUPS: $3.50-$5.40, SALADS: $2.95-$5.00, MUFFIN: $2.80, BEANS: $2.95-$5.50, PASTA: $3.50-$5.50
  - ET WALTZ 573 COLLEGE, 650-8429
  - SEE DESCRIPTION ABOVE PERUVIAN/SOUTH AMERICAN
  - SOUPS: $1.95-$3.25, SALADS: $2.95-$3.50, APPETIZERS: $1.95-$5.75, MAINS: $7.50-$15.75, PASTA: $2.95-$6.95, PIZZA: $2.95-$5.75, FISH&TAPA: $2.95-$15.75, SANDWICHES: $2.95-$6.95, TACOS & TIPLES ($2.50-$4.25)

AND BARS...

- SOUTHWIDE LOUVS 532, 522-1250
  - STUDENT DISCOUNTS ON SPECIFIC OFFERS.
  - MEETING MONDAY, TEQUILA TUESDAYS, CLUB A WEDNESDAYS
  - TUES, WED, HALF PRICE WINES, WED, HALF PRICE APPETIZERS, WED, HALF PRICE PASTA, SUNDAY GROUP DISCOUNTS
  - CONTEMPORARY BLUES, TRADITIONAL PUB ATMOSPHERE: FIREPLACE LOUVS, POOL
- BAR COOPED/THE WIDOWS YARD 551 COLLEGE
  - DISCOUNT WEEKENDS ($5 AND CHEAP), BREAKFAST $3.75, MUFFIN & BREAD: $2.50, BOWLS: $2.50-$5.25, SANDWICHES: $1.95 "THE DATEDO", SEATS 50, MANY POOL TABLES, BANDS UPST. "TEXAS DIRTY FUCKER", BOOK LAUNCHES, POETRY READING, PLAYoffs, GR. "DEATH OF EVEN EViNCEL" NOV. 2002
  - EXCELLENT COFFEE
  - OUTDOOR CAFE
  - "SECURITY OPENED" 1307 COLLEGE.
  - "GOOD FOOD" AND "COOL MUSIC".
  - LIVE MUSIC, TIME EXISTENCE LEDING UPSTAIRS.
  - STARTERS: $2.50-$25, MAINS: $8.25-$15.75, TEXAS MUSIC AND DRINKS.
- THE WILD BUNNY 576 COLLEGE, 534-7791
  - "THE PLACE WHERE BANDS AND ONLY OPENING S, 6-2AM TO THE BRASSERIES, 534-1975 - "TAVOLAZZA, BAR, BILLIARDS" KITCHEN OPEN UNT. 1:30AM (LATER CLOSED)
  - guitar and folk shows, PASTA: $3.50
- BAR TRIA 585 COLLEGE, 724-1621
  - HAS CHANGED A LOT IN THE LAST FEW YEARS (VERY MODERNIZED AND TECHNIQU).
  - AS ALWAYS, BARLLIORS: ITALIAN FOOD, NATURALLY
  - STARTERS: $2.50-$7.95, SANDWICHES: $2.50-$6.50
  - PASTA SPECIALS: $3.50-$6.00, MAINS: $5.50-$14.00
  - DON'T TAKE THESE PEOPLE FOOD SERIOUSLY

FACTOIE GALLERY

There is an interesting new art gallery which has been opened by the owners of Kalomidis Koffee House, KAFEE FACTOIE GALLERY: it's a restored sugar factory with the rough edges kept, makes it unpretentiousness with an added modern gothic feel to it. It's open Thursday-Friday 1-4PM, Saturday-Sunday 12-5PM. Until December 23rd the Factoie Gallery will feature Tanya Love, and a trio presentation of Harvey and Jeff Nelson and Tammy Howesley. Phone them at 647-977-4556, 416-705-6011. During the hours above, the place is usually located at 460 EUDC AV, JUST NORTH OF COLLEGE. It closes down this week for the winter until March.
Our Glendon Basketball team is participating in a tournament at the main campus from Monday October 20 until Thursday October 23. For more information call 487-6711.

In Major League Baseball News:
* The Montreal Expos have confirmed earlier suspicions that their payroll will continue to be cut until the year 2001 when they hope to have a new arena. Players Pedro Martinez and Mike Lansung are likely to be traded as the Expos hope to sign bigger players. They also hope that with re-alignment pending, they will be moved to the American League. During interleague play this season, their highest gate revenues were marked when teams from the A.L., played at Olympic stadium. The Expos also announced that Sherman Obando is now a free agent after refusing arbitration.

* The American League Eastern Series went to the wire as the defending World Series Champion New York Yankees were eliminated by the Cleveland Indians. While in the American League West, the Baltimore Orioles eliminated the Seattle Mariners.

* The National League Eastern Series had six time National League Champion Atlanta Braves taking on the Houston Astros. The Braves beat the Astros and moved one step closer to becoming the champion of the National League Western Series which had the San Francisco Giants play the Florida Marlins. The Marlins won their first ever playoff series and move on to the NLCS.

The final four teams remaining are: the Atlanta Braves vs. the Florida Marlins for the National League Championship Series and the Baltimore Orioles and the Cleveland Indians for the American League Championship Series.

* One of the Florida Marlins were destroyed by the Atlanta bats, they have offered an excuse for their performance. It seems Alex Fernandez, their game two starter who was rocked for five runs in two innings has a torn rotator cuff in his left shoulder. The Marlins have said that Fernandez is out for this season and maybe even next season as well.

* Major League Baseball saw 63 million fans attending games this season. It was their biggest increase since 1993 when 60.2 million fans went to see games.

* Brady Anderson led off last night's division series with a lead-off home run. This season, he led off the ALCS with a lead off home run. Ironically, Baltimore played Cleveland in division last season's division.

* The Philadelphia Phillies have announced that Danny Tartabull, Billy Brewer and Scott Ruffcorn refused assignments and have opted for free agency.

* The Anaheim Angels have announced that Craig Grebeck and Gregcarett have cleared waivers by the Minnesota Twins.

* The Minnesota Twins announced that they have acquired Joe Mays and Jeremy Polka as the players to be named in the trade for Kelly trade on August 21.

* The New York Yankees announced that they did not pick up the 1998 option for Tim Raines.

* The Cincinnati Reds announced that the 1998 option for Kent Mercker, Mike Morgan and Hal Morris will not be picked up.

In National Hockey League News:
* Pavel Bure and Brett Hedican have worked out deals with the Vancouver Canucks. Their hold- out list remains at one-allelist. The Canucks and the Anaheim Mighty Ducks opened their season in Tokyo, Japan. The week-end series was a big success as the games sold out in fifteen minutes. The series was set up to introduce the game internationally in preparation for the Winter Olympics in Nagano this February.

* The capacitvity in St. Louis has charged hands again. For now, Chris Pronger will be wearing the ‘C’. Long time Blue Brett Hull will not returning to St. Louis after his contract expired.

* Paul Kariya has not reported to the Mighty Ducks as of yet. He is having contract problems.

* Alexei Zhitnik has agreed to terms with the Buffalo Sabres.

* At the end of last season, Peter Karmanos announced that his Hartford Whalers would now be known as the Carolina Hurricanes. Peter Karmanos is no better in Carolina than it was in Hartford. Only 600 people showed up to the first ever game in franchise history. The expects Gary Bettman gave, the team plays 70 miles from the city and the board knew that week day attendance would be low.

* Since the NHL lock-out, players salaries have increased on average by 25-32%.

* Hockey Town returns! Four months after winning hockey’s most sacred prize, the Detroit Red Wings have had their achievement etched in stone, or at least in material. The Stanley Cup banners were raised high above center ice at the Joe Louis Arena at the Wings first home game of the season.

* The Dallas Stars have re-signed Derian Hatcher to a two-year deal.

* The San Jose Sharks announced that they have agreed to terms with restricted free agent Jeffries.

* The Toronto Maple Leafs announced their not so secret news when they named Mats Sundin as their captain. Sundin becomes the first- ever European captain in the NHL.

In National Basketball Association News:
* Alonzo Mourning of the Miami Heat will miss 8-12 weeks of the season. He recently underwent surgery to repair a torn ligament in his knee.

* Mugsy Boughs has re-joined the Charlotte Hornets despite doctors warnings. He has been playing with damaged knee cartilage and doctors say he is taking a dangerous route. Boughs relics by saying he knows how much pain he can take.

* The Golden State Warriors signed Isaiah Burton, Dell Damp.

* Antonio Lang and Larry Stewart.

* The New York Knicks traded forward John Wallace to the Raptors for a 1998 first round pick; they traded the pick to the Portland Trailblazers for Chris Dudley.

* The Seattle SuperSonics signed Greg Anthony to a one year deal.

* The Dallas Mavericks signed Kevin Ollie to a one year deal.

In National Football League News:
* A trade deadline passes, the biggest trade in ten years occurred. The defending Super Bowl Champion Green Bay Packers traded Wayne Simmons to the Kansas City Chiefs for an undisclosed draft pick.

* Chad Hennings of the Dallas Cowboys is out for at least six weeks with a groin injury.

* The Tampa Bay Buccaneers signed Sean Landeta and placed Tom Jackson on the injured reserve with a broken collar bone.

* The Washington Redskins signed Don Sasa and waived Brian Walker.

* The Miami Dolphins signed Brett Perriman to a one year deal. They also re-signed John Kidd and Kyle Richardson.

* The Minnesota Vikings signed Duane Butler from the practice squad; they also placed Robert Tate on injury reserve with an injured ankle.

In Canadian Football League news:
* The Toronto Argonauts signed Dennis Montas.

---

ORLY THE ONE AND ONLY MATCHMAKER

FLYIN' BRIAN DEAD

SEE YOU SOON SCOTTIE!

---

PLAYERS FIRST PUT TO THE TEST

---

FREE 30 MINUTES PHONE CONSULTATION (310) 659-7377 • Beverly Hills

---

Alison Sammut

On Sunday October 5, 1997, the World Wrestling Federation (WWF) lost one of its brightest stars. Brian Pillman was pronounced dead after noon in a Minnesota hotel room, dead of an apparent overdose.

At the age of thirty, Pillman was diagnosed with a brain tumor and underwent surgery. He recovered and went on to play professional football before joining the World Championship Wrestling (WCW), at one point while with the WCW, he was a member of the legendary Four Horsemen along with Arn Anderson and "the Nature boy" Ric Flair.

However, about two years ago, Pillman was in a severe motorcycle accident in which his legs were broken. The WCW decided he was no longer a part of their federation.

When his injuries diminished, he returned to the ring and worked as a commentator for about a year before he returned to the ring professionally.

Since the accident, Pillman had been taking pain killers, he apparently mixed them with alcohol and that combination killed him. Pillman’s final match was on October 4, he was to have a match at the WWF’s "Bad Blood" on October 5 against Dude Love. At the time of his death, Pillman was 35.

Scottie Pippen, who has been an integral part of the Chicago Bulls five time NBA championship team will be out of the next two months. Pippen underwent foot surgery on Monday October 6, 1997 to repair soft tissue in his foot.

The injury was sustained in game five of the Eastern Conference Championship against the Miami Heat last season. Over the off-season, Pippen was told to rest, but the pain began again and forced him to return to the Chicago Bulls five time NBA championship game and the first few practices of the season.

"Each season we start off with some sort of challenge and this makes it even more so," Michael Jordan stated after a recent practice.

The rest of the team must come together and fill the role which Pippen will not fill for the next two months.

With files from The Toronto Sun.

---

Alison Sammut

After the scandelous Graham James trial last January, the Canadian Hockey League and its three affiliate leagues-the Ontario Hockey League (OHL), the Quebec Major Junior Hockey League (QMJHL), and the Western Hockey League (WHL)—adopted a program entitled 'Players First'. The program was sponsored by Toronto based sports lawyer Gordon Kirke. It was designed to weed out pedophiles and help players cope with sexual abuse. The program has unfortunately been put to the test a few months after its creation.

Ted Ahara, General Manager for the Kitchener Rangers of the OHL is currently on sick leave after the league launched an investigation into allegations that Abara asked three teenagers to partially undress while being interviewed. All three boys are playing in the OHL but not for the Rangers.

Ted Schof, President of the Rangers stated "It's a trying time for (Ahara) and for us as an organization. We have to put our players first. We have a lot of concern. We have to make sure that our players are in the best hands possible." Schof also added that he would always be a parent or a guardian or another adult present when you're with players at all times, when you're doing interviews or anything like that. As for Ahara, the league has asked for his termination.

With files from The Toronto Sun.
"Auction Night at Glendon"
« Une soirée de vente aux enchères à Glendon »
(Wine & Cheese / Vin et fromage)
Saturday, October 25 / Samedi 25 octobre
In the cafeteria / Dans la salle à manger
19 h - 22 h

Another “Auction Night at Glendon”? Why Not?
We had so much fun the first time, we just had to do it again!

Get in touch with your friends and join us for an exciting night of auctions and raffle prizes as part of our Homecoming celebration. David Moulton, Glendon alum ('72), and our auctioneer for the evening is eagerly looking forward to giving out more unbelievable prizes once again. Come and meet alumni, faculty, staff, and administration as you sip wine and bid on these incredible items below:

- Barbecue Grill / Un barbecue
- Quebec City Weekend Getaway (train and hotel included) / Un weekend à Québec (incluant transport aller-retour en train et hébergement)
- Hockey Tickets to see the Montreal Canadiens vs. the Toronto Maple Leafs / Des billets d’hockey pour voir Montreal et Toronto
- Florida Getaway (hotel and car rental for 1 week included) / Une vacance en Floride (incluant hébergement et louage d’une voiture pour une semaine)
- Cellular Telephones / Des téléphones cellulaires
- Skydome Event Tickets / Des billets pour des événements au Skydome
- European holiday for 2 with airline tickets and hotel / L'Europe pour 2 personnes (incluant transport aller-retour en avion et hébergement)
- Limousine, Dinner, and Theater Tickets for 6 / Une limousine, le dîner et le théâtre pour 6 personnes

And Many More to Come! / Et plus à venir!