ALMOST FULL HOUSE

Students flocked to the Great Non-segregated Washroom Debate at Glendon

Orientation founds Founders

Orientation '65 Founders College variety was highly reminiscent of orientation at Glendon Campus in 1963 where freshmen outnumbered "others" by twenty to one---remember? Add to this a picture of "Muddy York" as it was years ago and then visualize Founders first Orientation.

Students at Founders College are at the top and bottom of something new and struggling. To the upper classmen fell the task of orientating themselves and then the freshmen to new buildings, rules and problems.

Credit for the success of the orientation programme goes to all freshmen but especially to those who participated in lectures, teas, and decorating bees. To those who carried bricks to the barbecue, who slaved over the fire on Saturday evening, go sincere thanks. Actually, the barbecue was a high point in Orientation especially among residence dwellers who had been living on soup and sandwiches for a long three days (no hot water was available for dish-washing).

Folk music, the movie "Rebel Without A Cause" and an informal dance completed the festivities on a foggy Saturday night. Incidentally, M.C. Mike Chisholm became a victim of the fog and was twenty long minutes late because of his difficulty in navigating the labyrinth of one way roads on Founders College Campus.

The Orientation Committee of Founders College would like to express thanks to students, staff members and others from both campuses who gave of their time, talents and patience. Above all, we would like to thank the freshmen who helped us to help them.

CUS raps fee hikes

The Canadian Union of Students last month called for a National Student Day on University campuses across the country.

Each University will stage a "demonstrative manifestation" of their discontent over fee hikes this year.

The motion, proposed by McGill, declared "the sole determinant of the undertaking of post-secondary education should be academic qualification".

University of Saskatchewan representatives, enjoying the lowest fees in Canada now, pointed out that "barriers vary from region to region".

Saskatchewan spokesmen said: "the abolition of fees is not our main concern".

"Universal accessibility" is to be the only criterion for tuition fee levels.

Each university is to decide for itself at what level tuition fees deter able students.

CUS is pledged to utilize "optimum political pressure to achieve this objective".

A York committee, headed by Student External Affairs minister Rick Schultz, was named at Monday's Student Council meeting to decide what form this action will have.

THE DAY THEY GAVE THE MONEY AWAY

Almost a third of all freshmen students at York are having their way paid -- either by the provincial government or the university.

Five years ago a total of six scholarships was granted by York.

This year over 260 students, almost a third of the freshies have received scholarships. The top ten students won a total of $15,000 this year. The other 250 won about $125,000, giving a grand total of $140,000.

With the opening of Founders College, enrollment in full-time day courses has reached about 1,400: about 400 students at Founders College (mostly freshmen), and about 1,000 students at Glendon.

YORK WILL GET BUSINESS FACULTY

Approval has been given by the York University Senate for the initiation of a Faculty of Administrative Studies; its first division, the School of Business will begin admitting students during the fall term of 1966. The faculty will be located at York Campus.

Dr. James M. Gillies, Visiting Professor of Administrative Studies at York University, on leave from his post as Professor in the Graduate School of Business Administration, U.C.L.A., is currently directing operations for the establishment of the faculty.

Dr. Gillies stated emphatically during an interview that Toronto, a metropolitan area of almost 2 million people, is a natural site for the establishment of business faculty. The mutual benefits flowing both to the business community and the university would be immeasurable, he said.

Dr. Gillies claimed a definite need to provide Canadian industry and commerce with competent, trained administrators. At present there are only two undergraduate Schools of Business in Canada, at the Universities of Western Ontario and British Columbia. The University of Toronto has Canada's only Graduate School of Business.

Dr. Gillies feels there is a great amount of room for research in business at present. It is expected that the York University School of Business will have a strong orientation towards research into the problems confronting the business commu-ity.

He felt that it was incumbent upon the Faculty of the School of Business to participate in Canadian public affairs and to offer constructive criticism to business as part of the university's continuing programme of education and service to the community.

The School of Business is to be followed by the Schools of Public and Business Administration, on both the Graduate and Undergraduate levels. Dr. Gillies hopes the faculty Administrative Studies will be, within a short space, the best in Canada, and within the next ten years, one of the best in North America.

Support from business seems, at the present stage, to be energetic, and members of industry and business are already serving on an Advisory Committee.

The first goal of the School is an extensive and well-equipped library. The School will offer a four year course; the first two years will consist of the general education programme now being offered at York by the Faculty of Arts and Science. The last two years of the curriculum will offer courses in the functional areas of business.

Dr. Gillies will address the sophomore class of York University, and invite those who are interested to enter the School of Business in their Junior year. He hopes to impress York students with the idea of the tremendous service the School can offer to the community and conversely to impress business with the university's responsiveness.

Dr. Gillies has been associated with the University of California, Los Angeles, for the past thirteen years. At present he is Professor of Real Estate and Urban Land Economics and Director of the Real Estate Research Programme in the Graduate School of Business Administration. However, he said that if his plans and suggestions are carried out and the school fulfills many of the expectations he has in mind, he may indefinitely postpone his return to California next year and head the York School of Business on a permanent basis.

COMMENT

Well dear hearts and gentle readers, it's September again; the leaves are changing, there's a federal election due in six weeks when the Government may change too, and Freddy Frosh (pictured above) has set his feet firmly on the road to becoming a Whole Man in a Community of Intellectuals. Good luck, Fred. May your tribe increase.

If you can read this you know there have been some changes made in Pro-Tem; our budget is increased by about 30 times over last year (a little more than $2 for every mother's child at York) and the format, if not the content, is a little brighter.

We hope the changes are for the better, but as usual there are corresponding disadvantages. Deadlines are tighter and tougher than ever, so articles and letters have to be submitted early. Space is at a premium, so be concise; save the brilliant rhetoric to impress your professors. Our printer is cheap but myopic; if you have at least one arm and two fingers we expect your contributions to be typed. Triple spaced. With one carbon copy.

In return we make two promises. This is the last time the word "apathy" will appear here. We won't talk about you-know-what among the frosh, profs or residence maids, if such there be. Instead we'll try to the best of our admittedly limited ability to amuse you, or entertain you, or even maybe educate you, just a little.

We'll wonder, in print, where the money comes from to build and operate a multi-million dollar university, and where it goes. We'll try to find one of those able students who can't go to university because of high tuition fees. We're told one exists. We'll ask how come all the academics-turned-politicians are Liberal candidates instead of NDP or Conservative. Is there a publish-or-perish policy at York? Are students smart enough to guide their own affairs? Has anyone seen a Whole Man? We'll try to find out. York is blessed with experts in every field from Greek urns to Canadian economics; some of the best brains in the country are here. We'll try to pick some of them, and print the pickings.

That's the second promise. Like the second-best car rental company, we'll try a little harder.

But bear with us, gentle reader, and be patient; like you we've got a lot to learn and a long way to go, but tentanda via. Stick around. It looks like a good year.

The Congress of Canadian Union of Students (CUS) met at Bishop's University August 28 - Sept. 4. Resolutions were passed on University, Canadian and International Affairs. Points discussed ranged from the establishment of a hostel system to the education of students in international affairs.

How does the World University Service of Canada (WUS) spend its money? Do you wonder where Treasure Van profits go? So does CUS. An investigation will be made, the Congress decided. CUS scraped up (magnum cum difficultatem) sufficient money to send ten university athletes to World Student games in Budapest. They won four medals.

At U.B.C. and McGill an attempt will be made to boycott tuition increases by asking students to withhold second term fees.

Southern Alberta Institute of Technology Student Council Head, Dick Angus charged that students are not free to form campus political clubs or to publish their newspaper without staff advisors. He said the administration could veto all council motions. Principal F.C. Jurgenson denied the charges.

First Laval congress submitted a brief to Quebec Education Minister Paul Gérin-Lajoie asking a provincial charter. If granted, Laval would attain status similar to that of most English Canadian Universities. Gérin-Lajoie will study the suggestion.

U.B.C. Science students rated their professors teaching ability. Student opinions compiled and published this year rated 33 out of 133 outstanding and 60 above average. Faculty reaction? --- mixed.

Tory leader John Diefenbaker told a CUS delegation in Ottawa Conservative policy is to raise per capita grants for University students. Pearson, in his turn, at a high school assembly in Algoma East Riding said money must "cease to be barrier to higher education". Right. Like those ten thousand $1,000 scholarships, Mike?

All Around TOWN

By Peter Dent

To-night at 8:30 sees the official end of Orientation. At 9, the popular grease group, the Cynics, return for another Animal Dance.

Monday, the 27th, there is to be a Co-ed Volley Ball game from 2-4 p.m. In the evening, Syd Banks and the C.F.T.O. crew will be taping three shows for the "Let's Sing Out" T.V. series.

All week, the Michael Snow exhibition, "Retrospective" will be in the Art Gallery.

York's own, the Toronto Rifles return to Maple Leaf Stadium the evening of the 25th; they play Charleston. The consistent Argos meanwhile try to make it nine in a row against Winnipeg at C.N.E. 2:30, Sunday, the 26th.

Several first rate shows in town this week, including Casanova 70 at the Towne Cinema (Yonge & Bloor), The Diary of a Chamber Maid at the International (Yonge below Eglinton), and The Married Woman at the New Yorker (Yonge below Bloor).

The Theatre scene is good too. The Canadian

REFLECTIONS

...By Garth Jowett

In this the first issue of PRO-TEM this year I would like to add my welcome greeting to all those who are attending York University for the first time. It is probably too early for you to have realized that this is a unique institution of higher learning; it allows the maximum contact between faculty and student body.

Taken on a straight vote the student body would probably split right down the middle on the usefulness of this close contact. There are those who feel that having left high school they should be allowed to proceed at their own pace with a minimum of shoulder-peering on the part of the faculty. Then there are those who thrive on the opportunity to discuss problems and request help from the lecturers.

Whichever camp you may fall into, you should be aware of nuances of both points of view. Those who insist that their status of university freshmen precludes their doing any work other than a few days cramming before the exams will obviously dislike the close supervision given in the seminar groups.

The seminars place far too much emphasis on the individual and have the detestable quality of showing how little work has actually been done. No one is actually sent down to the President's office as a disciplinary measure for non-performance, but it is definitely embarrassing. In a more tangible way it can affect the total mark the student receives at the end of each term.

From the other point of view, the easy access to lecturers for purposes of intelligent questioning and discussion is something that every student should learn to make use of. Only those students who have suffered through classes with upwards of two-hundred students and a lecturer who does the hundred in 9.5 secs flat to the door and down the corridor can fully appreciate this fact.

This column, then, is a plea for all those newcomers to York to make the most of the opportunities given by the University for close contact with the faculty, and to use this privilege (which it is) intelligently.

York provides other privileges of which you should be aware. Like most democratic institutions it has freedom of speech, and recognized means of expressing this freedom of speech. The washroom walls are out, while the pages of PRO-TEM are in.

The Student Council is a body that is elected by you and exists to serve you, and you should learn to make the proper use of it. Last year there was a cry for "more action" from the Student Council; this was a completely unwarranted attack on a group of extremely hard-working individuals by students who never bothered to attend a student council meeting.

Attending Council meetings is a privilege open to all students at York, but not many made use of it last year. If you take the trouble to vote in the student elections (as most students do) you should follow this up by seeing your parliament in action. And take the trouble to find out about the candidates before voting. Don't take the easy way out and vote for somebody because you happen to like his name, or because he is a friend of yours. The Student Council is a responsible body and it should be staffed with responsible people.

Criticism fine, but no Berkeley's: Ross

A university is, by definition, "a community in which there is frequent criticism, dissatisfaction with the status quo, sharp confrontation of opposing views", Dr. Murray G. Ross told students at the opening of lectures Monday.

A university is often pictured "as a quiet retreat from life, in which there is peace and serenity. Dr. Ross said, "You could almost believe they were talking about a graveyard!"

But while such unrest and dissatisfaction with the status quo is inevitable and desirable as part of the intellectual process, Dr. Ross was strongly critical of recent developments in campus life in which the purpose is to win a point, to defeat an opponent, rather than to seek out knowledge and understanding.

Such developments, he said, have "raised questions about the character of the modern university, the modern student, the modern professor and administrator".

He cited the riots and strikes on the Berkeley Campus of the University of California as examples of such developments. While some of these were a "natural, and indeed a welcome, development in the life of a university, some showed immaturity, irresponsibility, and a disregard for human values".

"In the years ahead", he said, "there will be many problems and difficulties at York. There will be differences of opinion between students, faculty, Board members, administrative officers of the University. It should be so. Democracy requires some tension to be effective. But always, I hope, we will seek to get the facts of the situation; always, I hope, we will be able to sit down and discuss differences; always, I hope, there will be good-will and a willingness to work for a solution that will consider York's best interest. I am not urging you to be placid; I am urging you to be rational and fair".

"How's that for making a war speech sound like a peace speech?" - A comment by one of Johnson's aides after Johnson declared how much it grieved him to double the draft.

The new chancellor of the University of California described last year's free-speech demonstration as "bad academic manners". I am wondering if the administration's suppression of free speech would be "good academic manners".

$1,550 in nickels and dimes

The used book shop in Glendon Hall sold $1000 worth of books in its first day of sale, Jim MacDonald reported at the Student Council meeting Monday night.

"This does not, however, represent a success", he added.

The Honour Course departments were niggardly with their book lists, and students failed to bring in an adequate supply of books.

The demand for the books, however, was great, with students coming from both campuses to the sale.

This would indicate, said Jim, that York Student Agencies will gain momentum and become an important organization of the campus.

Y.S.A. is "one of the first of its kind in Ontario", added President Al Young. It hires students to work for students and pays them wages.

Fifteen percent of the revenue from the book sale will go to Student Council to cover the cost of the operation.

Jim also reported that Howie Nemtin has had considerable success on the York Campus, selling $550 worth of "Yorkstuffs".

ELECTIONS: OCTOBER 7

Peter Cliffe-Phillips, Chief Returning Officer of Glendon College, has announced freshman elections will be held Thursday, October 7 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Music Common Room of York Hall. All of Glendon's freshies are eligible to vote, run and nominate for the position of First Year Representative. Three to be elected. Nominations close Tuesday September 28 at noon.

The resignation of the Treasurer, Mary Lynn Fairbairn during the summer has necessitated the calling of a by-election which will be held in conjunction with the First Year Rep. elections. Only students currently in third year may contest this position and only second and third year students may vote.

Campaigning for the election and by-election will begin Wed. September 29 and will be concluded Wed. October 6 with a "Meet the Candidates" Assembly and Tea.

GUSHER

Students and staff in the York campus dining room were interrupted at lunch Monday when a spume of oily black water spouted from an uncovered water pipe.

The greasy water shot ten feet in the air according to one report.

Apparently a careless plumber left a radiator pipe uncapped and it spewed when the heat was turned on.

Little damage was done by the gusher.

Cabinet Post For Winters?

Robert Winters, former Liberal cabinet minister, and Chairman of the Board of Governors at York University, announced last Sunday his intentions of seeking nomination in the federal riding of York West.

With the departure of "Red" Kelly from federal politics and the emergence of the prominent Conservative, George Hogan, as a possible candidate, this Toronto riding will undoubtedly be strongly contested in the Nov. 8 general federal election.

Mr. Winters stated that his main reason for seeking the nomination was his conviction of Canada's need for a strong and effective majority government which would be assured of a reasonably long and stable period in office, without recourse to periodic elections. In fact,

Mr. Winters strongly deplored the practice of holding frequent elections as has been the case for the last five years, in view of the inconclusiveness of these elections.

Prime Minister Pearson has talked to Winters about the possibility of a cabinet post, but there has as yet been no definite commitment made by Pearson and Mr. Winters has stated that no portfolio was offered.

Mr. Winters, in addition to his position on the Board of Governors at York, holds executive positions in at least fifteen major Canadian companies, among them Rio Tinto Dow Ltd., Algoma Steel and the Ford Motor Co. of Canada. The daughter of Mr. Winters is currently attending Glendon College, York University.

NO DISSENTERS ON COUNCIL?

The Student Council formed three committees Monday night in the first formal meeting at Glendon College.

Not one dissenting vote was cast against motions for committees to study the status of University clubs, the conduct of Student Council affairs and York's accessibility to students.

Rick Schultz, External Affairs Minister, called for a five-member committee to define "universal accessibility" in terms of York's barriers to enrolled and prospective students.

Universal accessibility was the theme of the August 28-September 3 Canadian University Conference in Lennoxville.

The conference agreed that any able student should have the right and means to higher education, and that each university has its peculiar obstacles - tuition, incidental fees, discrimination - which may prevent that student from attending.

Each delegation was charged with investigating what factors at its own university are, or may become, barriers to universal accessibility.

The York committee will draw up a program of protest against these barriers. The individual programs from all Canadian Universities will be submitted to C.U.S. and will be co-ordinated as a national demonstration of discontent against the federal government's present policy of aid to education.

The day will be October 27, named National Students' Day.

A motion by Garnet Barlow established a committee to investigate procedure concerning the conduct of Student Council affairs. Its recommendations would be used to form new by-laws for the Council Constitution.

There was some debate as to whether or not this committee should broaden its view by studying past constitutions and making recommendations to aid the York Campus Council in setting up a comprehensive constitution of its own.

"When we start preparing only for today's needs, we find it is yesterday quickly" said Second Vice-President Jim MacDonald.

It was decided, however, to vote on the original motion. It was passed, with no votes against.

In conclusion, John Davidson agreed to chair a committee to study and define the status of clubs at York.

York Athletic: 'Taylor-made'

Dr. Bryce M. Taylor comes to York Campus with enviable credentials.

He and Dr. Arthur Johnson, nuclear physicist and campus planner at York, last summer headed the Canadian YMCA Caribbean Sports Project as part of International Co-Operation year, supported by their $21,500 Grant from the Fitness and Amateur Sport Council of the Health and Welfare Dept.

Dr. Taylor, who obtained his Doctorate in Springfield College, Springfield, Mass., has set up an efficient athletic programme for 1965-66. With Mrs. Heather Ackerman (B.A., M. Sc. U. of Syracuse) leading the women's curriculum, there should be a well-balanced, room-for-all schedule at both intramural and Varsity levels.

Despite contractors' strikes which have left most other facilities unfinished, plans have already been made for a challenging Cross-Country course. Stretching 3.25 miles around the Campus, it will be the site of the first competition on the new Campus.

In the opinion of Dr. Taylor, a good high school runner will need eighteen minutes to cover this rough, angular course which winds through wheat fields and across the Black Creek with its slippery, sometimes washed out two-by-four bridges.

It is felt by some students, however, that a much more rigorous obstacle course could be devised at this time without straying nearly so far from the L.L.A.

or Founders' Residence on a wet day.

This Sunday, at 11:30 Paul Post brings his Toronto Olympic Club to go over the course for the first time. This group boasts such runners as Dave Ellis, U.S.A. National Cross Country Champ, Canada's 4:02 miler Jim Irons, and other top amateur runners from this area. With vantage spots throughout, there should be a good turnout to watch them kick off the Cross-Country season here.

Wind-Sprints an invitational high school meet from Toronto area will be held in October at York Campus.....and our own intercollegiate competition with McMaster over the 3.25 mile course.

Teach-in hits Oct. 8

The largest teach-in ever is slated for the weekend of Oct. 8 at U. of T., under the sponsorship of a number of distinguished university figures, including Murray Ross and Claude Bissell.

But the York students who turned out to hear drum-beater Henry Taravanin from Varsity at a rah-rah rally Wednesday didn't appear to be swept away with enthusiasm for the idea.

A fair number of Yorkers turned out from the rally, designed to whip a little York enthusiasm into the mammoth educational attempt, but all they showed was polite attention.

Current plans call for a chartered bus from York to Varsity's Convocation Hall--maybe, if enough supporters show up at a symposium scheduled here for Oct. 8.

Universities across Canada will be linked by telephone to the mass meeting, where authorities from several nations will discuss ideological conflicts in Asia and Latin America.

Prime attraction at the affair--if the organizers can pull it off--will be a confrontation between South Viet Nam and Viet Cong representatives, the first time the warring factions have met without guns.

So far the VC's are still being coy.

Dr. Ross has accepted a position on the honorary committee sponsoring the teach-in. Dr. Bissell is the honorary chairman.

The five major sessions--running round clock from Friday to Sunday--will be related to the central theme, the right of revolution.

Wednesday's rally here was supposed to instruct York students in the principles of a teach-in, inform them of details of the current effort, and encourage them to participate.

Most interesting question raised: who is supplying the heavy change required to hoist long-distance lines from coast to coast? They cost a bundle.

Al's Alley

By Alan Offstein

Thanks to Mr. George Snell of the CBC and Claudia Sullivan of CFTO, the students of York will be able to obtain tickets to all the regular television shows, panel discussions, specials and feature programmes which require a live audience. On the regular list of the CBC are NIGHTCAP and THIS HOUR HAS SEVEN DAYS; CFTO is offering SPOTLIGHT, CANADIAN TALENT SHOWCASE and A GO-GO '66.

Tickets for the SPOTLIGHT show starring the exciting Canadian entertainer Don Francks have already been distributed, and those for NIGHTCAP are on the Cultural Affairs bulletin-board. I would encourage all students to take advantage of attending these sessions, especially those featuring Canadian talent. Too often we tend to be indifferent to the abilities of our own performers, favoring American or foreign entertainment, and consequently ignorant of top-flight Canadian show-people. It is not until success in the States brings a Canadian name to the headlines that we realize the calibre of entertainment that is lost to our local clubs and theatres.

Every second Thursday evening CFTO tapes an audience dance show called A GO-GO '66, and York students are invited to participate in September 30 production. Somewhat similar to Shindig, A GO-GO '66 will feature four bands: John and Lee, The Charmaines, Linda Lane and Jack Hardin; but, instead of professional dancers, the audience provides the motion. It is a couples only dance, and the girls are to wear discotheque fashions while the men may rely on jackets and ties. If York can supply an audience of twenty-five couples, CFTO will provide free round trip transportation from Glendon College. Students from both campuses are invited to attend what promises to be quite an entertaining evening. Further information regarding CFTO's A GO-GO '66 will appear on the bulletin board along with tickets. (If you wish to see just what the show is like, tune in Channel 9, CFTO-TV this Friday at 8:30).

Muddy York...second installment

Students at the York campus waded through mud and construction debris to orientation and registration programmes this week, and the problems won't be solved for months yet. Toronto's nine-week construction strike delayed building on the new campus long enough to leave many facilities only partially completed when the first students arrived. Hardest hit were residence dwellers at Founders college who were left without hot water and hot meals for most of the week. Meanwhile at Glendon the young lady upper right sits in quiet contemplation in front of Glendon Hall, were upper-classmen and academic retreats can recall encountering the same problems. They survived.
